Expands Steel Boycott

Johnson Asks Civilians To Hold Purchases

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson ordered the government's civilian arm Saturday to join the Pentagon in boycotting purchases from price-boosting steel companies.

Still more federal pressure may be applied if the administration can find additional ways to do it.

At the Texas White House, press secretary George Christian told reporters:

"We're looking for every possible way to protect the taxpayers on this."

But at the time he spoke, there was no sign any steel firms were heeding a presidential plea to roll back price increases in which eight of the 10 largest producers have joined.

In Washington, Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., asked the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the steel-price boosts to determine whether they are economically justified.

Hart noted that steel costs play a significant part in the price of automobiles.

Earlier, Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., had called for a federal investigation of the price boosts, calling them unjustified.

The President, Christian said, conferred at the LBJ ranch during the morning with Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford and Joseph A. Califano Jr. of the White House staff on the steel situation.

Says Davis Distorted Editorial Statement

ST. LOUIS (AP) — State Senator Richard Southern released a statement Saturday he said was from the publisher of the Daily Dunklin Democrat, a Southeast Missouri newspaper, taking issue with statements attributed to True Davis.

Southern is campaign manager for Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton. Davis and Eagleton are seeking the Democratic nomination for Missouri senator. Southern said he was authorized to release the statement by publisher Jack Stapleton Jr., disputing remarks made by Davis in Sikeston, Mo., on Wednesday.

Eagleton's campaign manager charged that Davis implied in the speech that Eagleton was opposed to industrialization in Southeast Missouri. He said Davis cited an editorial in the Daily Dunklin Democrat to support his charge.

The Stapleton statement released by Southern commented, "True Davis in his speech, Wednesday, July 31, in Sikeston, completely distorted the purpose, content and conclusion of an editorial in my paper." Stapleton went on to praise Eagleton.

Establish Contact With Buried Manila Survivors

MANILA (AP) — Rescuers established voice contact early Sunday with an undetermined number of survivors entombed in the wreckage of a five-story apartment house that had yielded 111 dead since its collapse in an earthquake Friday.

Power equipment was stilled at midnight and a loudspeaker was brought into play across the pile of debris and twisted steel to urge any victims still alive to make themselves known.

"Shout or signal," the speaker urged in Chinese, the language of most of the apartment dwellers, and Filipino. "Do not be afraid."

A few minutes later came the response.

"They're shouting back," the speaker said. "There are still people alive there. One is a child crying for his mother."

Flashlights and floodlights helped rescue workers, including American servicemen, to locate likely points of entry in the crevices.

Fifteen minutes later the operations, which had previously recovered 254 injured persons, resumed full blast.

More than 3,600 men were on the job.

A second quake jolted Manila as the volunteers toiled in a drizzling rain Saturday to save the living and retrieve the dead.

Tall buildings and lamps swayed for a minute, but the toll seemed to be limited to some heightening of the damage in the initial quake.

American servicemen and other volunteers carried on without letup. They sifted debris hand to hand in a desperate effort to find 250 to 300 persons believed trapped in the pile of concrete, wood and steel that had been the Ruby Tower, a handsome, five-story apartment house in Manila's Chinatown.

They pulled out 26 bodies, bringing the count of recovered dead to 109.

A team of 120 Navy men, Marines and airmen from U.S. bases was involved in the rescue operation. They brought along trucks, air compressors, portable light trailers, water wagons, cutting torches, hydraulic jacks and other excavation equipment.

The Americans also brought in medical supplies and equipment, including blood plasma, morphine and body bags.

Rear Adm. Draper L. Kauffman supervised the team.

The Saturday quake struck at 2:26 p.m.

A downtown building, badly damaged Friday, got more cracks and leaned slightly. Police cordoned off the area as a safety measure.

The quake reached a magnitude of 4 to 5 on the Rossiforel scale of 9 in Manila. It was felt in lesser intensity in a number of northern Luzon provinces.

The 72-second quake Friday had reached a magnitude of 6.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his wife, Imelda, made periodic visits to the Ruby Tower wreckage. Marcos commended the volunteers, who included Chinese and Filipino Boy Scouts, churchmen, medical interns and students as well as the U.S. servicemen.

The Manila Weather Bureau blamed nature and men for the destructive effects in this city of Friday's quake.

The bureau said in a report to Marcos: "The comparatively loose composition of the geologic substructures in Manila makes it more susceptible to earthquake vibrations. This, coupled with patently inferior construction of some concrete buildings, is believed to account for the apparently disproportionate damage sustained in Manila."

Released Pilots On Last Leg Of Trip

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Twenty-four hours, two plane rides, a home-cooked meal with the American ambassador to Thailand and a dozen cigars later, three American pilots boarded an American airliner Saturday for the last leg of their journey home from Hanoi and months of captivity in North Vietnam.

The pilots, Maj. James F. Low, 43, Sausalito, Calif.; Maj. Fred N. Thompson, 32, Taylors, S.C., and Capt. Joe V. Carpenter, 37, Victorville, Calif., all had been shot down while on combat missions. Hanoi announced their release July 18, but they did not emerge from North Vietnam until 15 days later.

They flew from Hanoi to Vietiane, then on to Bangkok. Low had been a prisoner since Dec. 16, 1967; Thompson since Last March 20 and Carpenter since Feb. 15.

In their fourth news conference in 24 hours, the three pilots relaxed their previously formal attitude to questioning and gave some insight into what life is like in a North Vietnamese prison camp.

Low, speaking for his two companions, said his North Vietnamese captors had given the prisoners a load of bread a day and "sometimes a loaf and a half."

"The food was good," he added. "The food was fresh and included meat, mostly pork fat."

For entertainment they were allowed to read local newspapers and magazines, a Russian magazine and on rare occasions, copies of the American magazine Newsweek.

They also listened to Radio Hanoi. All pilots in the prison in Hanoi listened to news of the Paris peace talks with "great interest," he said.

Low said he and his companions had not met before their release. All prisoners eat alone.

Low repeated that he and his companions had decided to fly home commercially instead of by military flight because it was "in the best interests of the prisoners in Hanoi."

He said neither he nor his fellow pilots knew how they were selected for freedom.

"I guess they just picked our names out of a barrel," he added. The three pilots checked briefly into a Bangkok hotel before going off to dine with U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger.

Earlier they went shopping at a men's tailor. Two selected sports jackets, but when one could not be found to fit Llow, they all left without buying.

US Troops See Marine Leading Cong Patrol

PHU BAI Vietnam (AP) — For a moment the two young men, the American Marine and the white man in the uniform of the enemy stared at each other. Then the Marine fired.

"I fired five to eight times and he went flying back," said Lance Cp., Perry C. Gordon, 19, of Ballwin, Mo. "He fired two or three times as he was falling back into the stream, but I think it was just reflexes.

"I had to change clips and when I looked again he was up on one knee trying to get out of the water. He cried 'Help me,' and started to yell again when I emptied all 20 rounds into him. He just collapsed."

The violent episode July 15 was one of the strangest in this strange war.

Gordon and eight other survivors of the 10-man Marine reconnaissance patrol in the foothills of Troy Mountain say the white man was the lookout for a squad of North Vietnamese soldiers.

Five of the Marines who said they saw the white man were shown photographs of 200 American servicemen who have been reported missing in action. Four said the slain enemy resembled an American Marine who was 18 years old when he disappeared in 1965.

A Marine investigation followed and found that the man killed by Gordon "probably" was the missing Marine.

A spokesman for the 1st Marine Division said there would be no comment on the matter since it involves a person missing in action and no one found the bodies of the seven enemy soldiers the Marine patrol claimed it killed.

Several of the Marines suspect that the unknown white man, whom they call "the Caucasian," could have shot first but deliberately held his fire.

"He had time to shoot us, our weapons were down and we had to pick them up," said Lance Cp., Jim Wilker, 20, of Waseca, Minn. "I don't know if he wanted to shoot us or us to shoot him."

Gordon opened fire after moment of indecision. He was putting on his cartridge belt "when I looked and saw him 25 feet away. He was looking around like a pointman, and he looked right at me.

"I thought he was one of our men who went down for water but he turned and another VC stepped out. Then the Caucasian turned back and I was sure that he'd shoot me. He had an AK47 Automatic rifle in his hand but he just looked at me. That was when I fired."

Could the Caucasian have been a prisoner forced to serve as a decoy? The Marines don't think so.

Cpl. Charles H. House, 26, of Glendora, Calif., the patrol leader, said, "He fired at least twice when he was hit." He added that the incident occurred four miles south of Phu Bai, considered to be a "rear area" for the enemy.

Victim Of Caution

PARIS (AP) — The Latin Quarter's cobblestone streets have become the victim of government caution. A thick layer of asphalt now covers the stones so that there will be no chance student rebels will use them as missiles again as they did during the riots in May and June.

Donates Land

OSLO (AP) — The city council has allocated $67,000 to decorate the downtown area for the wedding of Crown Prince Harald of Norway to Sonja Haraldsen, a commoner, Aug. 29. About $17,000 will go for a canopy in front of the Oslo Cathedral.

Thieves Return Car

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The getaway car used in a $100,000 holdup, one of the largest in Argentina's history, has been returned to its owner by the thieves who took it from him at gunpoint. The bandits had promised Antonio Rainier when they took the car that they would return it.

Czechs, Soviets Reach Agreement

Adopt Joint Communique After Talks

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Czechoslovak leaders and their Soviet-led orthodox Communist critics have unanimously adopted a joint communique after talks "held in a frank and comradely atmosphere," the Communist news agencies announced Saturday night.

Unofficial sources said the party chiefs worked up a joint declaration which would permit this country's liberalization to continue. It is expected to patch up the rift between them.

An announcement by Tass and CTK, the Czechoslovak news agency, came after an unexpected snag delayed the signing by more than two hours.

Informed sources said the dispute developed in the editorial commission appointed to formulate the text.

The declaration is expected to be published later.

Leaders of the Soviet, East German, Polish, Bulgarian, Hungarian and Czechoslovak parties took part in the Bratislava talks, held in a modern trade union recreation house overlooking the Danube River.

The start of the conference coincided with an announcement by Czechoslovakia's Defense Ministry in Prague that Soviet troops have completed their withdrawal from this country. The troops, estimated to total 16,000, lingered here for more than a month after the end of Warsaw Pact maneuvers in which they participated.

The Weather

Pollsters Agree In One Way

NEW YORK (AP) — George Gallup Jr. and Louis Harris are in agreement that this has been a year of the unexpected in politics. Chances are they also are in agreement that this has been a week of the unexpected in their public opinion polls.

Harris on Thursday found himself consulting his arch rival Gallup after the widely divergent presidential surveys caused an uproar in the Republican party.

"We were getting an enormous number of inquiries," Harris said, "and we decided to see if we could examine the data together and find any commonality. We did and felt we had to report it."

Asked if it wasn't unusual for the two to confer on findings, Gallup replied: "It is, actually."

Between July 19-21, the Gallup Poll sent 300 interviewers into private homes in 321 sampling acres across the nation, where they asked: "Suppose the presidential election were bere being held today, if Richard Nixon

On A Shau Valley

Planes Lay Carpet Of Fire, Thunder

SAIGON (AP) —American B52 Stratofortresses laid their carpet of rolling thunder on the A Shau Valley again Saturday, trying to disrupt an enemy buildup that threatens Da Nang and the old imperial capital of Hue.

A Shau, which snakes 25 miles along the Laotian border, has been the main enemy supply zone since U.S. troops withdrew from the valley last March. Military spokesmen said the eight-jet bombers have dropped 900 tons of explosives on targets in the valley in the past two days.

The valley lies 375 miles northwest of Saigon, not far from where 101st Air Cavalry troops turned up five tons of weapons and ammunition last week.

Two U.S. helicopters were downed by groundfire in the A Shau Valley Friday. One chopper exploded, killing two crewmen and wounding two others. The two-man crew from the other aircraft was rescued.

The northern rovinces around Da Nang, the Marine headquarters in Vietnam, have seen increased ground fighting inrecent weeks. The latest engagement occurred Friday, but was not reported until Saturday.

Military spokesmen said North Vietnamese troops, spraying tear gas, invaded a small Marine radio relay station overlooking the abandoned Khe Sanh combat base and killed six Americans. The enemy seized a landing zone for helicopters supplying the isolated outpost, but were beaten back by the Leathernecks.

The Marines reported killing five North Vietnamese and capturing four rifles and four satchel charges.

Little significant ground action was reported elsewhere in the country.

Boating Accident Kills One

LAKE OZARK — The body of Gary Finnazzo, 16, St. Louis, was recovered about 5 p.m. Saturday following an accident on the Lake of the Ozarks about 1:25 p.m. Saturday.

The Morgan County sheriff's office said reports indicated Finnazzo fell from a boat which was pulling water skiers. The boat apparently hit him when it circled to pick him up.

The accident occurred on the Indian Creek arm of the lake near Our's Resort, southeast of Versailles.

Finnazzo was reported to be vacationing at the lake with friends.

Sheriff's officers from Morgan and Miller counties, the Missouri Highway Patrol and agents of the Missouri Boat Commission participated in the recovery operation. David Miller, Kansas City an employe of the FBI using scuba gear, located the body.

The victim was the son of Mrs. Mary Finnazzo, St. Louis.

The body was taken to the Scrivner Funeral Home, Versailles.

Rockefeller Forces Claim Victory In Efforts To Stop Nixon's Drive

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller's forces claimed success Saturday in their drive to stop Richard M. Nixon as the presidential infighting and the tropical revelry escalated in advance of the Republican National Convention.

Nixon men argued just as vehemently that the New York governor hasn't stopped a thing, that the former vice president will sweep to nomination on the first or second ballot next Wednesday night.

The delegates, the politicians, the pretty girls in campaign hats, even some imported Republican elephants, swarmed into the convention city.

And candidate Rockefeller headed southward to lead his own campaign parade in the climactic stage of his race to overtake Nixon.

California Gov. Ronald Reagan was on his way, too, saying he has a longshot chance of emerging as the nominee should the current top contenders deadlock.

A full-scale campaign headquarters for Reagan opened in the ornate Deauville Hotel. It featured a remainder of the Californian's onetime calling: a three-screen motion picture presentation of Reagan's political career.

Rockefeller's campaign manager, Robert Douglas, said flatly:

"The Nixon effort to gain this nomination on the first ballot has been stopped."

And after that first ballot, Douglas argued, Nixon's delegate strength will begin to diminish.

Leonard W. Hall, former national chairman and a Rockefeller strategist, estimated Nixon's first ballot delegate strength at 535, Rockefeller's at 350, Reagan's at 180 to 200.

Ten blocks up the beach, at a Hilton Plaza Hotel emblazoned with the name Nixon in gigantic red letters, the front-runner's camp made its counter-claim.

"Our private polls continue to show we retain the strength that puts us way over the 700 mark," said Herbert G. Klein, spokesman for Nixon. "Depending on the position of favorite son states, we have enough to get in on the first ballot and certainly the second."

The Associated Press survey of delegates showed 544 solid first ballot votes for Nixon, based on primaries, public statements, commitments and replies to the poll. That is down eight votes since last Thursday.

The AP tally showed 208 Rockefeller votes, 160 for Reagan, 207 uncommitted.

It will take 667 votes to choose the Republican nominee.

Nixon was in Montauk Point, N.Y., in frequent telephone contact with his convention command post.

Douglas scoffed at talk that Nixon was in seclusion to work on a speech of acceptance of the presidential nomination, and to consider vice presidential nominees. He said that was a Nixon attempt to convince people that the convention is not an open one, that the fight is over.

"Nixon strength will drop rapidly after the first ballot," Douglas said. He said there would be an initial shift of southerners to Reagan, an ultimate turn to Rockefeller.

Hall and Douglas both likened the current situation to the convention of 1940, in which Wendell Willkie overtook the front-runners and became the nominee. They said without swift victory, Nixon's backing will erode.

Douglas said Rockefeller has been on the telephone to delegation leaders, and has been successful in his courtship of uncommitted Republicans.

He claimed Nixon's strength peaked about two weeks ago, and may have declined by as many as 100 delegate votes, many of them southerners turning to Reagan.

While candidates posted their claims and delegates strolled the gaudy hotels and boulevards, Republican platform writers—far behind schedule—labored over the document they will send to the convention Tuesday.

They were debating behind guarded doors the issues of inflation, foreign aid and trade—and had not even reached the explosive question of a Republican position on Vietnam war policy.

Candidates For Relief To Biafra

WASHINGTON (AP) — The two major rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination are urging greater efforts by the United States to prevent mass starvation in Biafra, the breakway region in Nigeria's civil war.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., called it "intolerable that our own government has contented itself with what must be seen as vain and futile gestures while human life is at stake."

McCarthy said Friday the United States should go before

McCarthy said Friday the United States should go before the United Nations immediately to demand "a mandatory relief airlift of mercy to Biafra."

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey called the starvation shocking and said this country should support any U.N. efforts to aid the populace. Humphrey said, "It is morally intolerant to have innocent children and adults starving because of a political dispute."

Sixteen senators, including a favorite son candidate, Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., wrote President Johnson urging him to take steps to prevent starvation. They called for American neutrality in the civil war and said U.S. aid should be channeled through international or voluntary agencies.

The United States donated 5,000 tons of food worth $1.3 million to the international efforts three weeks ago. It made another $1 million in cash available to the Red Cross for mercy efforts a week later.

Fourteen Democratic senators and two Republicans signed the separate appeal to President Johnson. Among them were Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill.; Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., and Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., Humphrey's campaign managers, and Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., a former Cabinet official.

Saigon Reply To Humphrey View on Dzu

SAIGON (AP) — A South Vietnamese government spokesman said today vice president Hubert H. Humphrey is "entitled to his views" on the sentencing of defeated presidential candidate Truong Dinh Dzu.

Humphrey said Thursday that "it is most unfortunate" that Dzu, the runner-up in South Vietnam's election last fall, has been given a "severe sentence by the Saigon government."

A five-judge panel sentenced Dzu, a peace advocate, to a five-year jail sentence for advocating talks between the South Vietnamese government and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front.

Humphrey's statement added: "In recent months the (Saigon) government has made considerable progress to broaden its base and to improve the climate for free discussion of all public issues. This action represents a definite step backward in the effort to strengthen the critical institutions of South Vietnam. I regard it as most unfortunate."

Ton That Thien, South Vietnamese minister of information, said: "That is his (Humphrey's) opinion. He's free to have his opinion. But we are more concerned about the morale of our troops. These people tell them we're going to have the National Liberation Front in the government. People who are responsible for the morale of the troops feel that has an effect on undermining the morale. This is the time when we must fight our best. We must take a strong position on the battlefield for the real negotiations. This is the government's view."

Pope's Ruling Is Supported By a Cardinal

LONDON (AP) — John Cardinal Heenan urged Britain's Roman Catholics today to accept the Pope's ban on artificial contraception but told them not to despair if they fall to temptation.

Cardinal Heenan, Archbishop of Westminster and head of the hierarchy in England and Wales, made this appeal in a pastoral letter to be read in the 240 churches of his archdiocese.

He said the Pope's ruling will bring hardship to many. But he defended both its timing and content against the outburst of criticism that has shaken the Church throughout the world.

Cardinal Heenan was pro-president of the Vatican commission which urged by a majority a change in the Church's teaching. He said no member of the commission thought the final ruling could be anything other than a decision by the Pope alone.

Fire Destroys Feed Company

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — A spectacular fire destroyed the two-story, block-square Houston Feed Co., on St. Joseph's south side Friday evening.

Firemen were hampered by periodic explosions of chemicals, and the blaze sent up black smoke that was seen 40 miles awayiin Hiawatha, Kan.

No estimate of the loss was made by the owners. The firm employed a dozen persons in the manufacture of livestock feed.

Only one wall was left standing, and all contents were destroyed, including milling machinery, feed, and a warehouse section containing farm equipment and chemicals.

Cause of the fire was not known.

Dean Quits Over Uproar At a College

NEW YORK (AP) — Edward W. Barrett, dean of Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism since 1956, has resigned over policy differences with the administration, apparently stemming from the campus disturbances last spring.

In a statement Friday, the 53-year-old Barrett said: "I simply find myself in disagreement with the basic outlook of a majority of those who make university policy.

"I should add that, while I have real sympathy for many who seek constructive change, I have no sympathy whatever for the young SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) group who seek destruction.

"I hope that I can do all within my power, from the outside, to assist the university and particularly the Graduate School of Journalism, of which I am deeply proud."

Barrett submitted his resignation, to become effective Aug. 15, in a letter Wednesday to university President Grayson Kirk and the board of trustees.

Shortly after the resignation was made public, Kirk issued a statement saying in part:

"I know I speak for the entire university community in expressing regret over Dean Barrett's decision, which he discussed on several occasions with me, to relinquish his university duties."

Water Well In Missouri Senses Quakes

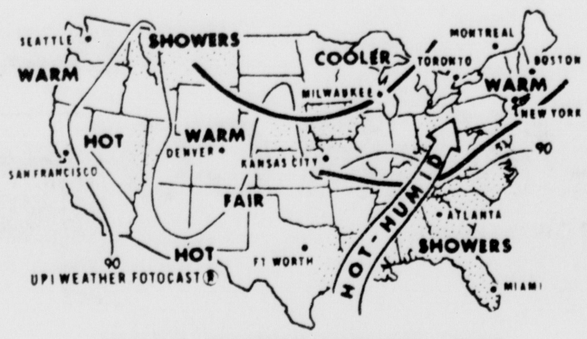

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — Vibrations from earthquakes in the Philippines and Mexico City were recorded by an instrument of the Missouri Geological Survey.

The instrument is in a water well in Rolla.

Water in the well oscillated one-tenth of a foot at 3:50 p.m. Thursday as a result of the Philippines quake. The Mexico City quake caused an oscillation of seven-tenths of a foot at 8:30 a.m. Friday.

The survey has recorders in 40 wells in Missouri, and several earthquakes have been noted in the past. The most severe was in a well near Springfield where the water oscillated 20 feet after the Alaskan earthquake of March, 1964.

The thief went to Parks Service Station where it was discarded in a rest room.

Several other complaints have been given police regarding purses being stolen which had not been checked out.

Zoma L. Hamling, Clinton, reported to the police her purse was stolen early Saturday morning at the Jockey Club. She returned to Sedalia from her home Saturday and the purse was found on the parking lot of the business establishment.

Stolen from the billfold in the purse was about $25 in money and a personal letter.

Accidents

A two-car accident occurred in the 1400 block of South Limit at 7:08 p.m. Friday.

Involved were a 1966 Ford, driven south on Limit by Bryan W. Herron, 24, 607 West Fifth, and a 1962 Ford, driven south on Limit by Edward R. Lawson, 49, Wheatland.

Damage was to the right rear of the Herron auto and the front of Wheatland's.

No injuries were reported in a two-car accident one-half mile west of Route T on Highway 50 near Dresden at 11:55 a.m. Friday.

Involved were a 1967 Ford Mustang, driven west on Highway 50 by Lee Evans, 17, Raytown, and a 1968 Dodge, driven west on 50 by Lee Sawyer, 21, 14 Heritage Village.

The front of the Mustang and the rear of the Dodge were damaged in the accident.

Parks' wrecker towed the Mustang from the scene.

Sgt. Sam Wollard of the Highway Patrol investigated the accident.

A 1962 Ford, owned by Carolyn A. Albin, 27, Otterville, was involved in a hit-and-run accident while parked on the Thompson Hills Shopping Center parking lot at 12:06 p.m. Saturday.

Damage was to the right side of the Ford.

Two persons sustained apparently minor injuries in a two-car accident at the intersection of 18th and Brown at 12:15 p.m. Saturday.

Involved were a 1955 DeSoto, driven west on 18th by Dorothy E. Martinez, 27, Omaha, Neb., and a 1864 Ford, driven north on Brown by Billy Rex Dotson, 21, 259 East Saline.

Dorothy Martinez and a passenger in her car; Angella Martinez, 10, Omaha, Neb., were taken to Bothwell Hospital by the Sedalia Ambulance Service where they were treated by Dr. T. J. Hopkins. Dorothy Martinez complained of injuries to her head, neck and shoulder, while her daughter, Dngella, complained of a bump on her head, according to the police report.

A two-car accident occurred at the intersection of Sixth and Osage at 4:15 p.m. Saturday.

Involved wers a 1962 Ford, dirven east on Sixth by Robert Lee Moore, 17, Muscatine, Iowa, and a 1954 Chevrolet, driven south on Osage by Russell H. McCampbell, 66, 1800 South Grand.

Damage was to the fron of both cars.

Moore was issued a police summons for careless and imprudent driving.

First Male Nurse In School History

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Brackenridge Hospital School of Nursing graduated its first male nurse in the school's 53-year history Friday, a 29-year-old former Air Force hospital orderly.

Paul Bass, 29 and married, also worked in the Austin State Hospital before starting his 3-year nurses' training at Brackenridge. He is a native of Jacksonville, Tex.

Bass said he decided to become a male nurse because of his training in the Air Force and "because of the need for nurses in general." He will work as a nurse for a local urologist.

Parking Lot Nets Youths a Profit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Hunters Point Boys Club has turned a redevelopment agency delay into profit—$6,000 and more to come.

The youngsters talked the agency into leasing them a vacant block for $1 a day until development can begin on a $12 million apartment skyscraper.

The boys from the underprivileged Hunters Point area made a parking lot out of the space at 75 cents per car. They are making about $125 a day.

The developers have encountered delays in plans and financing. What was supposed to be a couple of weeks delay on May 9 when the boys club made their deal has been extended to late September.

Vandals Put End To Party Plans

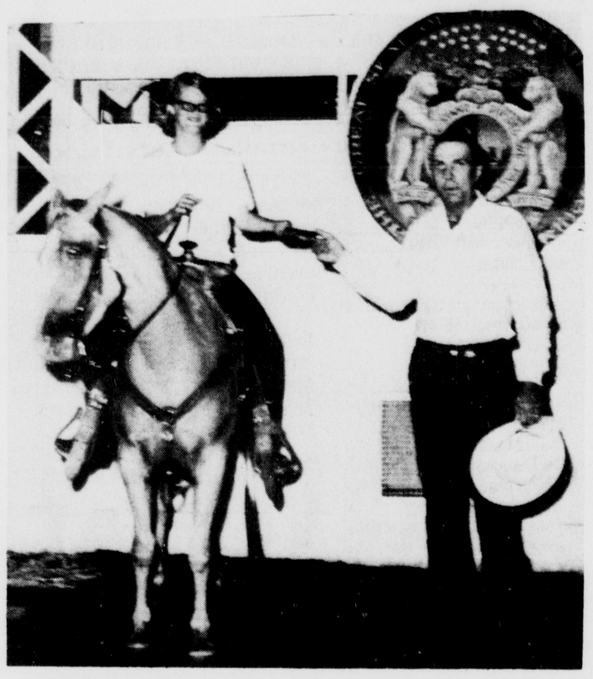

CLINTON, Iowa (AP) — A splash 'n' dance party planned here for Friday night was postponed a week for good reason: no water.

Management of the Clinton municipal pool said vandals broke into the pool's filtration room early in the day and opened water outlet valves.

Before the vandalism was discovered, some 400,000 gallons of the pool's 750,000 gallons of water drained into the Mississippi River.

Question What funeral benefits are available to the survivors of a deceased worker who qualifies under Social Security?

Answer A lump sum death payment based upon the Social Security record of a worker who dies either fully or currently insured may be payable to his survivors. This may be as much as three times the worker's primary insurance amount, but no more than $255. The lump sum may be paid in addition to any monthly survivors' insurance benefits that are due.

If there is no eligible surviving spouse, the lump sum benefit may be paid to the person who paid the funeral expenses or it may be assigned to us as a credit toward funeral expense.

WE STOCK BOTH FAST AND SLOW SELLERS

Recent news stories told how supermarkets and discount firms are telling manufacturers: "Sell us only your fast sellers. We are weeding out all others." Their reason is that the small amounts sold of slow sellers are not profitable.

This is true, but sometimes slow selling products can be very important to the persons who need them. There are hundreds of them in our pharmacy that sell only about a dozen of each a year. We buy only a quarter of a dozen at a time and re-order when they are sold. Our reputation is to have whatever you ask for. If we don't have your favorite, tell us.

YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a medicine and we will gladly deliver it without charge. If you prefer you may pick it up at our drive up window. We keep accurate records for tax and insurance purposes. We carefully fill welfare prescriptions and deliver or mail free of charge. A great many people entrust us with their prescriptions. May we compound yours?

Headquarters Force Guides Campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Monday mornings about 10 o'clock for many months past seven men with one goal have been sitting around a conference table in a New York office building discussing what they could do that day toward making Richard M. Nixon president of the United States.

A calm, pipe-smoking Wall Street lawyer named John Mitchell presided as the high command of the Nixon campaign talked about strategy, spending, delegates and Democrats.

Those seven men are in charge of a headquarters force estimated at about 300 people, quartered on New York's Park Avenue and Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington, and of a political enterprise publicly estimated to cost $5 million through Aug. 7.

That is the day the Republican National Convention chooses a nominee for the White House. Nixon men acknowledge that the real outlay may be somewhat higher than the $5 million estimate.

In their Park Avenue policy Nixon lieutenants have debated and approved such plans as the big city-big state approach already set for the fall presidential campaign they expect to be waging.

They have discussed the uses of television, decided that Nixon shows best in rather informal appearances. And so they have already begun a series of broadcasts in major states in which Nixon will talk informally and answer questions put by voters.

They have assigned staff members to research thoroughly the public statements of Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to provide Nixon with the background he will need for a campaign against the man they expect to be the Democratic nominee.

Should Minnesota Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy score an upset and win the Democratic nomination, the Nixon policy panel would face some arduous overtime. Contingency plans are in short supply.

The Nixon operation already has the appearances of a command post for a general election campaign.

To a man, Nixon's political agents insist they have not pressed delegates to pledge themselves to the candidate. As they see it, Republicans are in a mood in which they do not want to be pushed.

"If somebody wants to be uncommitted, that's fine," one Nixon man said. Then, with a shrug: "If he isn't nominated, we're all wrong."

But no one in Nixon's shop has any doubt about the nomination. The real thrust already is aimed at November. "Nixon has had the honor of being nominated once," an aide said.

"This time he wants to win." The organization that is trying to help him do that is composed largely of newcomers to the Nixon ranks. These are the key men, members of the policy committee:

—Mitchell, 54, a partner in the Nixon law firm.

Typically, his is a new face. He has been closely associated with the candidate for about two years in law practice, is more lawyer than politician.

"I've never held an office in the Republican hierarchy," he says. "I've been associated with individual candidates and issues."

But the practice of law has kept him on the fringe of politics — and made him some contacts valuable in a presidential campaign. Mitchell is a Wall Street expert on state and municipal bond issues. "In doing that work we have worked with the political power bases," he said.

He moved, unannounced at the time, to the top of the Nixon organization early this year, after former Oklahoma Gov. Henry M. Bellmon left it to run for the Senate.

—Leonard Garment, another Nixon law partner. He is 44, works on media, communications — and almost anything else that comes his way. Garment, for example, arranged a long session in Philadelphia at which Nixon talked a little — and listened more — to a group that included civic leaders and militant Negroes. They talked about city and Negro problems, and Nixon assistants considered the session a valuable move toward communication between the Republican contender and the black community.

"I'm the utility infielder," says Garment, who once played clarinet in big name dance bands.

He, too, is new to politics.

—Richard J. Kleindienst, 46, chief of field operations — which means a collector of delagate votes. He served in the same role in Barry Goldwater's campaign four years ago, left to run unsuccessfully for governor of Arizona.

Kleindienst contrasts the two campaigns: the Goldwater hard sell, a conservative drive to sign up delegates; and a low-pressure Nixon approach.

To avoid ruffling any political feathers, Kleindienst said, Nixon's delegate hunt had been deliberately low keyed, one of telling Republicans their support would be appreciated, but not pressing for vows of fealty.

The major objective, he says, was to make sure that Nixon in his bid for nomination did nothing which would alienate any Republican in the final campaign against the Democrats.

—Herbert Klein, 50, Nixon's director of communications. He is an old Nixon hand, was press secretary to the then-vice president during the White House campaign eight years ago. Klein is on leave as editor of the San Diego Union.

—H. R. Haldeman, 42, a West Coast advertising executive, chief of staff in the headquarters operation. He was chief Nixon advance man in 1960, managed Nixon's losing 1962 campaign for governor of California.

—F. Peter Flanagan, 44, deputy campaign manager, an investment broker with helpful contacts in the business establishment. He worries about problems ranging from convention arrangements to the image presented by the workers in the street-level office of Nixon headquarters.

At one point, he didn't think they looked busy or plentiful enough to convince passersby that something was happening inside; went upstairs seeking to draft more people to give the place an aura of activity.

—Robert Ellsworth, 42, national director of the campaign. A lawyer and three-term congressman from Kansas, he has been working for Nixon's nomination now for nearly a year.

Ellsworth divides his time between Nixon headquarters in Washington — his base — New york and the road. He worked on convention planning and delegate contacts.

Kleindienst and Ellsworth had two partners in the delegate operation — Charles K. McWhorter, 45, a long-time Nixon aide who served as his legislative assistant during the vice presidential days; and John Sears, 27, detached from the Nixon law firm.

Their soft-sell theme ran through a series of conversations with the men on Park Avenue. It stemmed in large measure from the experience of the GOP four years ago, when Goldwater's tough, ideology-oriented campaign enraged liberal Republicans and left many of them ignoring the ticket during the autumn campaign.

This time, Nixon and his men were determined, the campaign for nomination would flow without incident or indignation into the race against the Democrats.

"We haven't had a bunch of political hotshots running around browbeating people," said Mitchell a few weeks ago. "It just wasn't appropriate at this time that we take a hard line approach."

"The prime concern in choosing somebody — a state chairman for example — is what they can do for the ticket in the fall," said Kleindienst.

He claimed the Nixon organization had even sacrificed delegates who could have been enlisted with a bit of persuasion, in the interests of party harmony and unity next fall.

One man who sits in on the policy sessions recalled a day when Kleindienst was called upon for an accounting of the delegate situation.

He gave his figure on Nixon strength, and immediately faced a barrage of questions about its accuracy. Finally, Mitchell zeroed in on one state, asked for the potential Nixon delegate vote. Kleindienst gave it.

"I think that's conservative," Mitchell said.

"Well," replied Kleindienst, "I'm a conservative."

Which leads to another point Nixon men talk about: the variety of ideological viewpoints in the inner council.

"There are all kinds of viewpoints and people," said Garment. "There are the pugnacious guys and the retiring ones, the writers and the thinkers and the talkers."

"Nixon has put together one of the most broad-based, most comprehensive organizations I've ever seen," said Kleindienst. "It cuts across ideology."

The men around Nixon agree that the candidate, who once had a reputation for spurning advice and trying to manage his own campaigns, is a listener now.

"He takes care of the issues and the personal appearances and we take care of running the campaign," Mitchell said.

"He's absolutely accessible," said Garment. "I've called him at midnight, one o'clock in the morning."

Nixon likes to see the ideas and proposals of his advisers reduced to writing. So memos are the major form of communication with the candidate. But the telephone is always there.

When gun control became a major issue, Nixon advisers decided a statement on the subject was in order. Kleindienst talked it over with two of the speech-writing-idea men, Patrick Buchanan, 29, and Raymond K. Price, 37. They worked out a statement advocating stiffened penalties for crimes committed with a gun, but disagreed on whether it should recommend specific penalties or speak generally.

So all three got on the telephone to Nixon, who chose the general approach.

The Nixon staff has made its mistakes. One troublesome oversight: the choice of Baltusrol Country Club, to which Nixon belongs, as the site for a meeting with New Jersey convention delegates.

The club does not admit Negroes, although Nixon said it has some Jewish members.

For several days, the candidate faced questions about discrimination in his club, replying with insistence that he is working to eliminate it.

That could have been avoided by an advance check.

There have been Nixon statements which his advisers would just as soon forget, for example, the candidate's short-lived argument that President Johnson shouldn't appoint new justices to the Supreme Court. Nixon now maintains a no comment position on the Senate uproar over Johnson's appointments.

Nixon camp has avoided the major, glaring errors which Nixon has held all along are the only thing that could deny him the nomination.

Buchanan, 29, conservative in outlook and a former editorial writer for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat; and Price, 37, who once wrote editorials for the New York Herald Tribune, are two key men in the Nixon corps of idea men and writers.

Among other Nixon aides in that department: Martin Anderson, 30, on leave from Columbia University; economist Allen Greenspan, author Richrd Whalen.

And there are more men in other fields: Frank Shakespeare, on leave from the Columbia Broadcasting System and working on campaign television; Robert Finch, lieutenant governor of California, a 1960 campaign manager who remains close to Nixon.

Nixon's staff is big and his headquarters are sprawling. The main address is 450 Park Avenue, a five story building which once housed the American Bible Society.

The nerve center of the operation is across the street, on the third floor of an office building, where Mitchell and his deputies are based.

There is a station in Washington, the white, blue and red building on Pennsylvania Avenue where a Nixon campaign committee opened its doors months before the candidate announced he was running.

For purposes of symbolism, that outpost is a scant block from the White House. Ellsworth is based there; as is the organization's effort to collect small contributions with mailed solicitations.

Maurice H. Stans, 60, director of the budget bureau to former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, is the chief fund-raiser. He works out of New York.

There is a Washington research operation quartered near the Capitol; a congressional liaison effort; and a swiftly expanding committee called United Citizens for Nixon.

That group is headed by Charles S. Rhyne, a lawyer and Nixon classmate at Duke University Law School. Thomas W. Evans, 37, national director of the group, is a partner in the Nixon law firm.

'Wishful Thinking'

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The "mechanical heart borders on science fiction and is wishful thinking" in terms of permanent heart replacement says transplant surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley.

Dr. Cooley, of Houston, Tex., who has performed eight transplant operations in the past three months, told newsmen Friday that heart transplants have their limits as well.

The operation "is designed for end-stage, irreversible heart disease," he said.

Patients are offered "the possibility to get out of bed, to get well, to be relieved of taking heart medications and to have a new start in life," he said. "The alternative is death within a few days."

Six of his living transplant patients are "smiling, well, free of pain and several of them are back at work," he added.

Revolution Chief Topic In France

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — A lot of the talk at Paris sidewalk cafes this summer is about the chance for an "October revolution" like the one that brought the Communists to power in Russia 51 years ago.

A caricature in the popular satirical weekly, Le Canard Enchaine, shows President and Mrs. Charles de Gaulle with the single word "October" in a balloon over their heads. The caption: "A penny for your thoughts."

Actually the situation in Russia in 1917 and in France in 1968 have little in common.

Russia already had overthrown the czar. The great masses of people were suffering from a lost war and a long history of oppression, poverty and ignorance. The army took a leading part in the revolution.

In France the riots led by university students last May, and the strikes that followed, had De Gaulle's government wobbly at one point. But in June it won its greatest victory at the polls, and even many people accustomed to voting for the Communists made it clear they wanted no revolution.

So far the French revolutionary movement has failed to throw up any outstanding leaders. Daniel Cohn-Bendit, a 23-year-old sociology student, won much popularity among young people when he defied De Gaulle's government by returning from exile in the midst of the crisis—somewhat as Lenin returned to Russia in 1917. Cohn-Bendit is now reported out of the country again, just as Lenin slipped across the border into Finland after some unsuccessful rioting in July of that year.

But Cohn-Bendit, unlike Lenin, seems to have no interest in becoming a political leader.

Whether there is trouble in the fall will depend largely on a much more ambitious and experienced politician: Edgar Faure, the new minister of education.

As minister of agriculture he brought many indignant peasants back into the Gaullist fold. Now he is being challenged to show whether he can do the same with the students. His problem: to give them enough satisfaction to undermine the small group that wants to use their discontent to start a revolution.

Faure's first step was to announce that 5,000 or 6,000 of the additional 12,000 university students expected in Paris this fall will be accommodated in the big white headquarters built for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. NATO left France last year because of De Gaulle's hostile attitude.

The decision may have some symbolic as well as practical meaning to the students. Many dislike NATO as a symbol of the cold war.

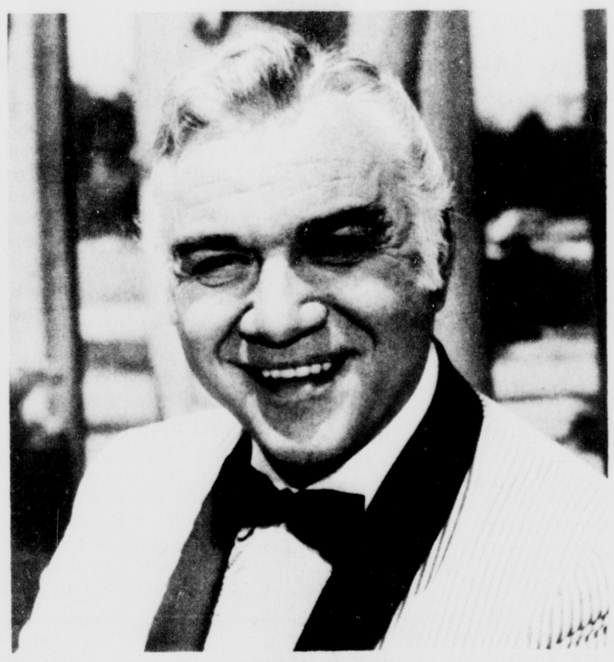

But it had already been expected that the building would be used for some educational purpose and anyhow, students are more concerned with outdated methods of teaching and examination. Faure has promised to do something about these, too.

October will be a critical month. The high schools will be just starting. University students will have returned from their vacations for school openings in mid-November.

The chances are that whatever Faure does, large numbers will find it inadequate. Groups will do their best to minimuze his accomplishments.

To the extent that old-line union leaders can keep discipline, there is likely to be little trouble. The biggest French union, the General Confederation of Labor, is run by the official Communist party. It has shown no sign of eagerness to take over the government.

The young revolutionary students do not belong to the official Communist party. They are admirers of Fidel Castro and Che Guevara. They trade on the generation gap, trying to persuade young workers that old union leaders are just as much a part of the established way of things as old professors and old politicians. Their case will be strengthened if the big wage increases granted by the establishment in June are overshadowed in the fall by rising prices and unemployment.

The Head Man

Lorne Greene, in a relaxed mood, looks back on ten years of being head of the mighty Ponderosa Ranch for the NBC-TV production Bonanza. (AP)

Ponderosa Boss Still Surprised

Editor's NOTE—Television's "Bonanza" is going into its 10th year and is still riding high on the ratings range. Lorne Greene, the patriarch of the "Bonanza" Cartwright family, tells what it's been like to play the same part all these years.

By LORNE GREENE
Written for
The Associated Press

Ben Cartwright, like old wine, has mellowed and is a lot easier to live with now that we're starting our 10th year of "Bonanza" on NBC-TV. I have continued to maintain my interest because the character never ceases to surprise me. I don't get tired of him any more than you would of an old friend.

In "Bonanza" the circumstances change, but the characters remain the same. When the circumstances are dull and you've been through them four or five times, then you mine your mind, spirit, heart and and remembrances of the past to bring something new to the scene. It's a constant challenge.

I'm asked if I ever get tired of Ben Cartwright. After all, I know him better than anyone. Yes. Sometimes I say, 'I wish he wasn t such a goody-goody.' I wish they'd let me make a mistake sometimes. Ben Cartwright is always the paragon of everything good. But, I'm still continually finding new facets of his character. Hopefully, I look for the author to help, but if he doesn't, I search myself.

I've changed Ben Cartwright over the years. When we first started in 1959, over 468 episodes ago he was a rather tyrannical patriarch who quoted from the Bible and shot a gun at will—a man who was jealous of his land.

Anytime a stranger arrived he was asked, "What are you doing on the Ponderosa?"

We changed that because it seemed to me in those days the only really outside communication came from visitors. My thought was to ask, "Hey, come on in, stay four or five days, relieve our monotony and tell us what's going on in the world."

So, Ben Cartwright changed and became much more friendly and I think it helped the show.

I'm also stimulated by people with whom I work. You get men like Dan Blocker and Michael Landon, with whom you probably spend more time than we do with our individual families, and you're stimulated.

Sometimes we're stimulated by the fact that the show opposite us may get a good rating and we say, "By gosh, let's do a better job."

But, I think the thing that captures my interest more than anything else is the people I meet. I travel a great deal. People by the thousands come up and shake my hand and tell me what they think of the show and how, in many cases, it has affected their lives.

We're seen in 79 countries, in 17 foreign languages, by over 400 million people each week.

When I get off the plane in Rome the porter yells, "Signor Bonanza," and in Spain it's "Papa Bonanza."

It's a wonderful thing to know that "Bonanza" is not being shown behind closed doors in a barrel. It's being seen and people like it and that stimulates me and makes me feel alive.

Nixon Fan to Call Roll During GOP Convention

By FRANES LEWINE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — The New England accent of a Vermont woman lawyer-legislator will sound the rollcall of the states when the 1968 Republican National Convention nominates its presidential candidate this week.

Making her debut as national secretary, Consuelo Northrup Bailey of South Burlington, Vt., whose ancestors settled in Vermont in 1790, says she isn't a bit worried.

"I've made speeches at Republican meetings in every state of the union and conducted jury trials for 40 years—so, I naturally don't get butterflies in my stomach," she said in a pre-convention interview.

A 68-year-old widow who practices law and runs a dairy farm, Mrs. Bailey has been a GOP national committeewoman since 1936. The first woman ever elected lieutenant governor of a state, she served as presiding officer of the Vermont Senate and as speaker of its House.

If it portends anything, the woman who calls the roll of states at the convention says she is a Nixon fan—"I always have been."

Mrs. Bailey is one of a group of women who have prominent roles—from holding the purse strings to handing out hospitality—at this 29th GOP national convention.

The money—a budget of more than $650,000—is in the hands of GOP Treasurer Mrs. J. Willard Marriott, a District of Columbia national committeewoman and political and family friend of Michigan Gov. George Romney.

Mrs. Marriott wrote checks at the 1964 convention, too, and is not without some personal financial experience. She kept books and wrote checks when the Marriotts launched the first of a now multimillion dollar chain of restaurants.

The hospitality—including welcoming bouquets, free orange juice, sightseeing tours, fashion shows and bags of Florida's citrus fruits—is in charge of the national committeewoman from Florida, Mrs. Helene Morris of Sarasota.

The vice president of a family-owned steel firm in Evansville, Ind., she's credited with helping to rebuild Republican strength after she came to live in Florida in 1946.

Miss Josephine L. Good, native of Denver and resident of Washington, D.C., is the first woman to fill the role of a convention executive director.

With three trunks and six boxes of records, she arrived in Miami Beach July 15 to take charge of convention preparations as she has since 1960. She came up the ranks from business to secretary on Capitol Hill in 1946 and administrative assistant to Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield in 1953.

In 1956, Chairman Leonard Hall recruited her as assistant to longtime GOP convention executive director William J. Donald. When he died in 1958, Jo Good moved in as his successor, and she has held it ever since.

While women are prominent in the convention organization, they don't pack much punch in the decision-making.

Out of 1,333 voting delegates, only 224 are women. Not one woman heads a state delegation.

Some 15 states will lose representation on these committees this year because they don't have four women delegates. New Hampshire, for example, doesn't have a single woman on its eight-member delegation and Nebraska, with 16 delegates, has just one woman.

The convention won't have the excitement of any woman candidate like the entry of Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine into the balloting for the presidential nomination in 1964.

Mrs. Smith, the first woman placed in nomination for the presidency at a major party convention, won't be at the Aug. 5-9 sessions. She is scheduled to undergo surgery in New York to correct an arthritic condition in her left leg.

Legal Service to Poor Urged For Bar Backing

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Bar Association's board of governors says riots and violence in the nation's cities, which "can never be condoned," have increased the urgency "for more adequate legal services for the poor."

"It is perhaps not surprising that some of the poor have not been respecters of law and order and of the rights of others when their own rights have been denied, particularly by our failure to provide them with counsel," said a resolution which the board recommended Friday for adoption next week by the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates.

The proposal was among scores which the board planned to present at the 91st annual ABA convention.

Specifically, the resolution endorses the recommendations of the President's Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders for an over-all legal attack on slum housing problems and consumer exploitation, and the creation of neighborhood action task forces.

Another resolution backed by the governors urges Congress to pass legislation guaranteeing military justice, with full legal rights now afforded civilians, to men and women in the armed forces.

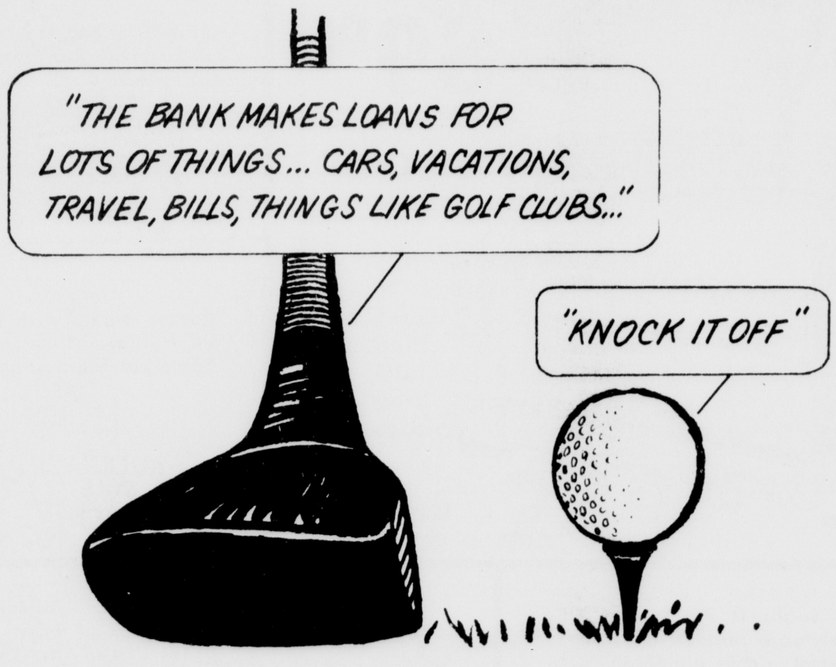

Some lawyers attending sessions of ABA affiliates announced support of Justice Abe Fortas whose confirmation as chief justice to succeed Earl Warren has been delayed by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Fortas will be in Philadelphia tonight to address the annual dinner of the American College of Trial Lawyers.

Joseph A. Ball of Long Beach, Calif., president of the college, said at a news conference Friday, "There is no reason—no excuse—for the Senate to delay confirmation" of Fortas.

Missouri Candidates Head For Wire

By LARRY HALL
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Democratic races for U.S. Senator and lieutenant governor take the spotlight in Missouri's primary election next Tuesday.

In sharp contrast with the situation four years ago, when there was a real battle for the governorship nomination, that is all but settled in both parties this year.

In fact, the conceded victors, Democratic Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and Republican Lawrence K. Roos, St. Louis County supervisor, have ignored the primary and have been running against each other.

It's a different story in the senatorial contest. There U.S. Rep. Thomas B. Curtis of Webster Groves is the obvious winner for the Republican nomination but incumbent Democratic Sen. Edward V. Long of Clarksville is fighting the battle of his life.

Long is being challenged by Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton of St. Louis and True Davis of St. Joseph, former U.S. ambassador to Switzerland and a former assistant secretary of the Treasury.

Long has been pounded by Life Magazine and many newspapers for his alleged connections with Teamster and Steamfitter union leaders. He has called the charges an attempted smear.

Eagleton has campaigned throughout the state in a hard hitting campaign concentrating on the nation's issues. He has charged both Davis and Long have spent beyond the legal limits and challenged them to reveal their campaiign expenditures.

Davis has talked about businees needs and tariff restrictions while using all the gimmicks and gadgetry that money can buy in his campaign appearances, pllus heavy emphasis on radio and television advertising.

Most observers rate the contest a tossup with Long and Eagleton the front runners.

A bitter campaign also has been waged for the lieutenant governorship, often seen as a step toward the governor's chair.

In that contest the two top candidates appear to be William Morris, Jackson County public administrator and businessman, and Edward L. Dowd, former president of the St. Louis County Police Board and former St. Louis circuit attorney.

Dowd has accused Morris of unsavory connections with St. Louis and Kansas City hoodlums, which Morris has denied.

Watching this controversy are State Sen. John E. Downs of St. Joseph, who says the two are engaged in reciprocal hysteria, and James W. Shaffer, former Jackson County Democratic chairman who is running with the blessing of the Committee for County Progress.

Five other candidates in the race are not expected to make a dent.

On the Republican side, State Sen. Lem T. Jones Jr. of Kansas City is the acknowledged party favorite. He has two primary opponents.

The Democratic race for attorney general also developed into a slugging match when Russell Millin, former U.S. district attorney at Kansas City, challenged Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson of Ferguson.

The third candidate—an outsider — is John E. Hosmer, Marshfield and Springfield attorney.

Millin has charged Anderson with underworld connections, an inflated payroll, and has asserted that Anderson does not live in Jefferson City. Anderson, who apparently has the bulk of the organization support, has denied the charges.

On the Republican side it's John C. Danforth, wealthy Creve Coeur lawyer, versus Joseph E. Furtaw of Hillsboro with Danforth given the edge.

Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick is home free with no opposition for Democratic renomination. Republican candidates are Murray C. Colbert of Montgomery City, former state ASC director, and Maurice S. Warner of Creve Coeur, a political unknown outstate.

There's a field of five for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer, where William E. Robinson, Jefferson City insurance man and longtime treasurer of the Democratic State Committee, appears to have the inside track.

In the Republican tussle for treasurer, former State Rep. William T. Zimmerman of Warrenton, who has run before, is battling former State Sen. W. H. Macon of Frontenac, onetime St. Louis County GOP chairman. Zimmerman is better known outstate but Macon can be expected to run up a sizeable vote in metropolitan St. Louis.

Three congressmen decided not to run this time and that has created spirited races in the 1st, 2nd and 10th districts.

In the 1st, being vacated by Rep. Frank M. Karsten, D-St. Louis, the Democratic race apparently is between former State Treasurer Milton Carpenter and William Clay, St. Louis Negro leader. The normally Democratic district under the 1967 reapportionment is predominantly Negro but the Negro vote reportedly is split.

In the 2nd District both parties have hot contests going as a result of Rep. Curtis' ecision to run for the Senate.

On the Democratic side it's Raymond Harris, former St. Louis County coroner, against James W. Symington, son of Missouri's senior U.S. senator. Both have campaigned hard.

On the Republican side the contest appears to be between State Rep. Robert O. Snyder of Kirkwood and former county councilman Hugh Scott of Clayton. Roy W. Bergmann of Normany and Norman A. Myers of Overland are the others in the race.

Another battle developed in the 10th District of southeastern Missouri when veteran Paul C. Jones, D-Kennett, announced he would retire at the end of his present term.

With 11 candidates on the Democratic ballot in the heavily Democratic district, the top men are reported to be State Rep. David Rolwig of Charleston and Bill D. Burlison, Cape Girardeau County prosecuting attorney.

Several others are expected to cut in on their votes, especially Winston V. Buford of Eminence and Harry L. Peterson of Flat River.

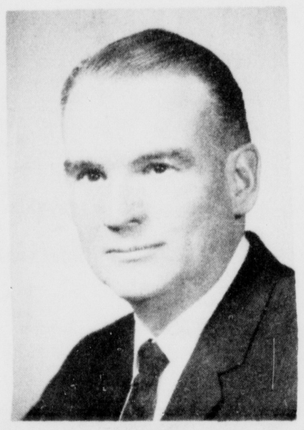

Other incumbent congressmen are not expected to have any trouble and five have no primary opposition. They are Mrs. Leonor K. Sullivan, D-St. Louis, in the 3rd District; William J. Randall, D-Independence, in the 4th; Durward G. Hall, Springfield, in the 7th, and William L. Hungate, Troy, in the 9th.

Missouri has more than 2 million eligible voters but Secy. of State Kirkpatrick has estimated only about 850,000 will go to the polls, based on a spot check of election boards and county clerks.

Voter interest is reported extremely light in places where there are few if any local contests. A total of 850,000 would be about 1 per cent fewer than in the 1964 primary.

Polls open next Tuesday at 6 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. except in rural areas where sunset is the closing time.

Sen. Downs Here To Campaign

Sen. John E. Downs

John E. Downs, State Senator from the 34th District, St. Joseph, was a visitor in the Sedalia and Pettis County area in behalf of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor, visiting with numerous friends and meeting voters.

Sen. Downs, it will be recalled, was active in the passage of the bill through the State Senate making it possible for the Girl Scouts to purchase Sacajawea Girl Scout camp southwest of Sedalia.

He is 51 years old, a native of St. Joseph, where he was reared and educated. He attended law school at Washington University, St. Louis, and holds an LL.B degree from the University of Missouri, 1940. He has served Buchanan County, his home county, as prosecuting attorney, served the county as Representative in the Missouri House, 1956-1960, when he was elected to the State Senate where he now is serving.

He served in World War II and attained the rank of Lt. Col. in the United States Marine Corps. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and five Air Medals. He saw service in the southwest Pacific.

Holder of a commercial pilot's license, he flys himself on campaign trips throughout the state.

Sen. Downs has been awarded the American Civil Liberties award, 1962, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce Good Government Award. He served on the Democratic State Committee.

Indictments Are Returned In Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A two-year investigation was climaxed here Friday when a federal grand jury returned extortion indictments against Richmond Flowers, former Alabama state attorney general, and three other men.

U.S. Atty. Macon L. Weaver said indictments were returned against Flowers, Joe Breck Gantt, an assistant attorney general under Flowers; Oscar E. Hyde, Birmingham banker and businessman; and James C. Kelly, Laurel, Miss., businessman.

The men were accused of having conspired to "wrongfully extract payments from persons, companies and corporations doing business in Alabama during Flowers' term in office."

Flowers served as attorney general from 1963 to 1967, and ran as a distant runnerup to the late Gov. Lurleen Wallace in the 1966 Democratic gubernatorial primary.

The indictment concerned alleged conspiracy involving the issuance and sale of stock in an insurance company, and the extortion of money from small loan companies through threats of investigations and closure suits.

Say Missouri GOP Choice Is Uncertain

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Democatic senatorial candidate True Davis said Friday the inner city is "dying because it has been made the dumping ground for every one else's failures."

Davis e.plained in a speech for the Spanish Society in St. Louis that unskilled migrants are flooding into the city, while the more affluent city dweller is moving to the suburbs.

He added that as they moved to the suburbs they took their "tax dollars and their civic consciousness and their middle-class values."

The city is "in a bind," Davis said. "America as a whole has an obligation to pay the cost of job training and job placement of the unskilled migrant who just happened to have landed in a particular city.

"All America has an obligation to pay the extra cost of educating the ghetto children and remedying the cultural deprivation that has been bred in many states."

Oil Company Give-Aways Are Halted

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has ordered four major oil companies and four service stations to halt give-away contests in Orange and West Orange.

Judge Nelson K. Mintz said Friday the promotional games were "games of chance."

The decision affects all service stations dealing in fuel distributed by the Humble Oil Co.; Getty Oil Co.; Shell Oil Co., and Atlantic Richfield Co., in the two Essex County communities.

The ruling was the result of a suit by Nicholas Del Spina, operator of a Mobile service station in Orange.

Body Found Of Stowaway

PARIS (AP) — The body of a Yugoslav housemaid who stowed away in the wheel well of a jetliner that left here Thursday night was discovered today in a garden eight miles from Orly Airport. She apparently fell out.

The dead woman was identified as Dobrila Pantic, 29, who had been questioned earlier in the week by airport police after she was caught wandering around a restricted area.

She had told them she wanted to join her fiance in the United States, but had no money. The fiance's name was not known.

On Thursday, an off-duty pilot reported he saw a woman climb over a fence and disappear under a Portuguese Airlines Boeing 727 jet plane preparing for a flight to Lisbon.

By the time airport officials learned a woman might have climbed into the plane, it already had taken off. The pilot reported he had to try four times until he got the nose wheel locked into place.

About eight miles from Paris' Orly Airport—along the runway axis used for the take off—the woman plummeted what investigators today estimated was a distance of 1,800 feet to the ground.

Pilots said that even if she had managed to stay inside the wheel well, she would have faced certain death by freezing

Long Hunt For Father Has a Happy Ending

DETROIT (AP) — Orphanages and the Army were his parents for 20 of his 21 years, but now Meyer "Mike" Weinberg has a real father again.

"I searched for 12 years. I was in Chicago, New York—just about all the states. I sent letters and got a reply that Dad ended up in Detroit. So I came here and found him."

Until his discharge, the ex-paratroper and Vietnam veteran carried all that he knew about his family with him in a dog-eared manila envelope.

Finally, a Lawrence, Kan., newspaper, the Journal-World, helped end his 12-vear search.

A reporter for the paper, Gary Burge, wrote letters that finally traced the elder Weinberg, 52, to Detroit.

Mike Weinberg said he and his two sisters became practically oprhaned because of "family troubles." They were sent to an orphanage at Anniston, Ala., he said, but "the orphanage closed and the three of us were sent to another orphanage in Cleveland."

"My sisters were adopted out when I was young, and I don't remember them," said Mike. "I stayed until I was 17, then I joined the Army."

He served 12 months in Vietnam, part of the time as a machine gunner. After being wounded, he returned to the United States and was discharged with the rank of specialist five.

He said within a week after being discharged he had found his maternal grandmother and some uncles. The grandmother, living in Birmingham, Ala., told Mike his mother died in 1961.

A hitchhiking trip to California led him through Kansas where he met a family that took him in for a while. He did odd jobs around the house in exchange for meals and a bed.

While he was there he learned his father was a printing pressman. Reporter Burge began writing letters to various printing and pressmen's unions.

A response from the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America turned up the information that the elder Weinberg had once been a member. Further checking showed he lived in Detroit.

The family he had been staying with in Lawrence had Mike Weinberg flown to Detroit.

When he got to Detroit, about three weeks ago, he said, his father "stood in the doorway shocked," and his grandmother, Mrs. Rosa Brown, just cried.

Pilot Dies In a Crash

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A small plane struck a sign above a 28-story building Friday night, then crashed through the roof of the nearby Las Vegas convention center, killing the pilot.

Authorities found a wing lodged in a revolving "L" sign atop the landmark tower, which houses businesses and a casino that hasn't yet opened for business. Wreckage was strewn about the convention center 100 yards away, where the only occupant was a guard.

Nobody was hurt in either building.

Authorities identified the pilot, alone in the plane, as Everett Shaw, 39, of Las Vegas.

Dissidents Bug Hubert

By GENE SCHROEDER
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey ran into opposition from both right-wing and left-wing demonstrators Friday in campaigning for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The dissidents were vastly outnumbered, however, by the crowds that turned out to cheer Humphrey at a daylong series of speeches, dedications and political rallies.

At one point along the way—when photographers and television cameramen focused on a heckler, the vice president admonished:

"Boys, turn your cameras this way. This is where the action is."

Several signs were spotted in the crowd charging that "Humphrey coddles rioters" and "HHH gives in to Black Power." Newsmen recognized some of those holding the placards as members of a local right-wing organization.

Humphrey missed the largest demonstration of the day, which wound up in a clash between police and about 200 left-wing demonstrators at Detroit's huge Cobo Hall Convention Center.

While the vice president was taken under heavy security into the rear of the building to attend a voter registration rally featuring singer Frank Sinatra, the demonstrators surged down a hallway chanting anti-Vietnam war slogans.

Most wore hippie-type garb, and some carried signs favoring Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., who is Humphrey's chief rival for the nomination.

They clashed with police in a brief scuffle that ended with two demonstrators being hauled away in handcuffs and the others warned that they would be charged with resisting arrest if they tried sprawling on the floor.

In the face of the police show of force, the demonstrators finally departed after about a half-hour confrontation. They did not get into the auditorium where Humphrey was seated.

Learning Explosion Felt in Wisconsin

STEVENS POINT, Wis. (AP) — Officials at Stevens Point State University had a real blast when they broke ground for the school's fine arts building Friday.

Instead of the usual shovel, a small dynamite charge was used to turn the first earth. Fine Arts Dean William Hanford said the blast represented "the cultural explosion this building will create in central Wisconsin."

Corporate Farm Growth Is Small, Says Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Large corporate farms have not made serious inroads into the traditional family style of American agricultural production, says a new report by the Department of Agriculture.

The survey is a preliminary report on corporate farming in 22 states. It was ordered last fall by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman and released Friday.

Corporations make up less than one per cent of the commercial farms in the area, operate less than seven per cent of the land and sell about four per cent of the farm products, the study shows.

"Further, more than 70 per cent of the corporations found were family - owned, including many family type farms which have incorporated for business reasons," the report said.

Large-scale, corporation agriculture has caused concern among many who claim that huge "conglomerate" farming corporations could spell doom for family-type operations.

Sen. Gaylford Nelson, D-Wis., who has been investigating corporate agriculture for the Senate small business monopoly subcommittee, said the survey shows corporate farming is growing steadily and that more information is needed.

"No one suggests that corporation farming has already taken over American agriculture. But this report confirms the fact that the trend is increasing rapidly," he said in a statement.

A total of 6,700 corporation units are farming about 40 million acres of land in the 22 states. About one-third operated nonfarm activities in addition, the survey found.

Gross sales from the corporate farms were estimated at slightly less than $1 billion, about four per cent of the cash receipts from all farms in the area last year.

Nearly 60 per cent of the 400 largest corporations were family owned.

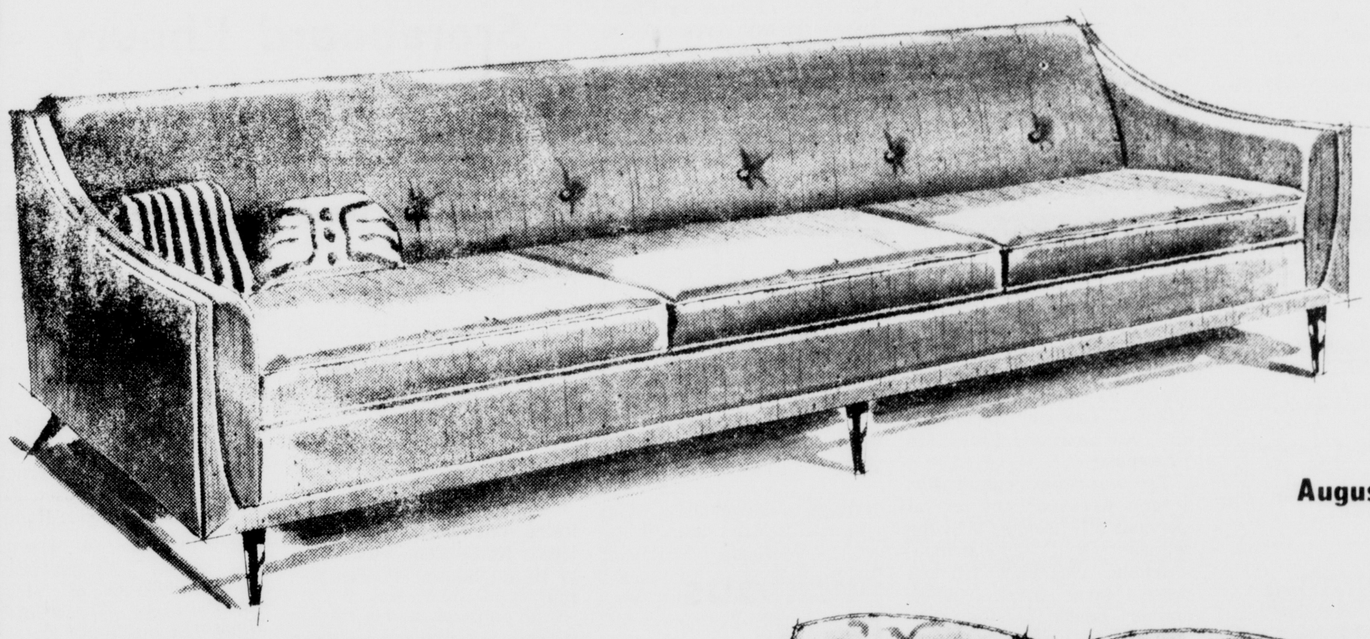

Corporations owning land but renting it to others were among those excluded.

States included in the preliminary survey: Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Washington and Oregon.

State Champs Will Play Two Exhibitions Here

As A Tune-Up For Regional Tourney

Sedalia's Missouri State Champion Babe Ruth team will play two exhibition games with the Senior Babe Ruth 16-year-old all-stars Sunday and Monday evening at Liberty Park, both games starting at 8 p.m.

The state champions will try to stay in shape for the regional tournament in Wellington, Kan., next week in these two games, which promise to be exciting, as both teams have a great desire to win.

The proceeds from each game will go to defray the expenses of the Wellington trip.

Sport Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

Remember "Old Blue," the catfish in the Lake of the Ozarks which grew famous through the writing of M. N. "Puny" White when he ran the Benton County Guide, now the Enterprise. It was kept famous by the writings of his son Mahlon K. "Jab" White who is running the paper since Dad moved over to Clinton.

We haven't heard much lately of those wild stories, but I venture to say the stories were as widely read as any on fishing. One thing is for sure. "Jab" can write sports, fishing or what ever comes to mind and his latest is his front page story, one and one half columns wide, as to how and why he is going to vote for United States Senator Edward V. Long.

An issue ago (the Enterprise is a weekly) the column was presented to the readers by Jab. He headed up the article "Senator Long Knows Where Benton County Is!"

He continued by saying "We've had several people ask us, in the past week, how we were going to vote in the Democratic primary, in that Senate race.

"We were happy to tell them—and tell them why.

"We're going to vote for Senator Ed Long."

He then went on at great lengths to inform his readers why.

Funny as it may seem, the same question has been asked of me for several weeks. I gave them the same answer on my voting, not that it means a lot. I only hope those who figured they would vote for Senator Long don't change their minds because of my own opinion and decision. It is not necessarily the opinion of the newspaper.

But, back to Jab and his thinking, he has written reams, reams and reams on "Old Blue," that big catfish in the Lake of the Ozarks reportedly seen from time to time. I am not too sure, but I think maybe Jab could revive "Old Blue" or some of the great-great-great-grandcatfish swimming in the waters around Warsaw—even the ghost of "Old Blue."

A movement is on foot by Little League to start playing rag tag football during the fall season, hopeful that it will be of great assistance to regular school football in their later years. I understand several of the men who have been working with Little League this summer are encouraging and anxious to install the program for the youngsters.

Rag tag football is being played on the school grounds of the elementary schools at present and the young players are enjoying it.

It is too bad Sedalia doesn't have a midget football program like in Kansas City and throughout Kansas. I understand and can also see that it is an expensive program to start. But it could be beneficial to these youngsters who later on will be wearing the grid togs of Smith-Cotton.

I am told by those who have been associated with midget football that it is no more dangerous than rag tag. As a matter of fact rag tag looks to me as if it might be a little more dangerous. Midget players have the regulation padding, helmets and other protective equipment, while rag tag is running and pulling a rag from a ball carrier.

Anyway whether it be rag tag or midget football, it is something to keep these youngsters occupied and building them up physically.

As to Little League pictures, we have complaints that pictures have not appeared in the paper. Please don't blame us.

Publication of pictures was delayed pending identification by League officials, which was less than prompt.

Coca Cola Wins League 'A' Title

Petev Cline, on the mound for Coca Cola, went the entire route to see his team win the Little League "A" City Tournament championship. The Coca Cola team defeated the Elks by a 13-2 score for the "A" League City Title.

Cline, a champ on the mound, allowed but two hits, struck out six batters and gave up one free trip on a walk. Jim Van Horn was behind the plate for Cline.

Louis Gero was credited with the loss for the Elks with Mike Cramer his receiver.

Members of the championship team are: Tim McMullen, Dennis Conner, Doug Knight, Gavin Hesterlee, Freddy Washington, Petev Cline, Jim Barns, Steve Allen, Keven Collins, Tony Beaudette, Jim Van Horn, Jim Stetzenback and Mike Knaus. Joe Van Horn is the manager and Raymond Barns is the coach.

Gene Gregory, sponsor and local manager of the Coca Cola Bottling Co., was presented a trophy by the league. Gregory is treating the team to a Cardinal baseball game in St. Louis, Sept. 8.

DeLozier Wins Club Tourney

The Sedalia Country Club Membership Club Golf Championship is now held by C. C. "Spec" DeLozier, who won the tournament play last week. DeLozier defeated John "Buddy" Thomas in the finals 2-up to become the 1968 Champion.

The tournament played over several weekends saw several pervious title holders fall by the wayside. Dr. C. C. Kateman, defending champion, fell out when Mayor Ralph Walker, former holder of the title, moved out after beating George Thompson, 1-up in 19 holes. Walker lost out to Thomas 3-2. Jim Buchanan, also a former champion, got a first round bye, and was then defeated by Lou Temple.

DeLozier to move out defeated Fred Evans, then Gordon Childers, to meet Temple in the semi-finals to win it 1-up in 20 holes. The clashed with Thomas in the finals.

"A" Flight was won by Maurice Griffin who defeated George Dugan, Jr., in the finals.

"B" Flight went to Dr. John Lamy who defeated Jack Shoemaker in the finals.

"C" Flight was won by Dick Esser who defeated Keith Yount for the title.

"D" Flight — a nine hole competition, went to Dr. J. W. Maunders who won over Adam Fischer.

Nicklaus Leads Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Defending champion Jack Nicklaus, dropping a seven-foot eagle 3 putt on the final hole, equaled the Olympia Fields course record of 65 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 11-under-par 202 to take a four-strike lead in the Western Golf Open.

Nicklaus, who also had an opening round of 65 and then skidded to 72 Friday, carded 33-32 in battering the course standard of 35-36—71. Nicklaus has not won a tournament since taking the Sahara Invitational last October.

Jim Moughan

Little Jimmy Moughan Will Race In Sprints

Little Jimmy Moughan of Springfield, Ill., has proved that auto racing is for men of all sizes. He's one of the many entries in the IMCA Grand Championship Sprint Car racing programs scheduled for the Missouri State Fair here, Saturday afternoon, Aug. 17, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 25. First race will start at 2:30 o'clock each day.

Moughan stands 5 feet 7, weighs around 135 pounds soaking wet and in a topcoat. He looks more like a jockey, and he's nicknamed "Gentleman Jim."

Moughan came out of the modified ranks in 1964 and made his first year in the International Motor Contest Association an impressive one. He won rookie of the year honors in '64 and finished second to the champion the next two years on the tough IMCA circuit.

Last year Jim was fifth in standings and he smacked out impressive victories in the Hawkeye Futurity at the Des Moines and Eldon, Iowa races besides qualifying among the top ten at the Missouri State Fair.

In the off-season and between races, Moughan is a gifted interior decorator. This parallel is hard to believe, but so is the picture of little Jim sitting at the wheel of a huge sprint car.

Moughan will have a new mount this year, after wheeling Hector Honore's "Black Deuce" last season. He will be driving the sparkling gold-and-white No. 16 owned by Bill Hoback, Kansas City. Hoback, one of the real veterans of sprint car racing, has tutored such racing greats as Jud Larson, Greg Weld, Jay Woodside and Ray Lee Goodwin in recent years.

In addition to the two sprint car programs, Aug. 17 and 25, IMCA late model stock car races will be held on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 18, and a double-header Saturday afternoon and night, Aug. 24. The afternoon race — 100-miles — will be on the one-mile track and the evening race on the half-mile under lights. The 15th annual Missouri modified championship races will be held Saturday night, Aug. 17, and Friday night, Aug. 23.

Curt Flood Painting Portrait Of King

... By CHARLIE BAROUH ...
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Curt Flood, the gifted center fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals and just as gifted a portrait painter, is paying his small tribute to a man he deeply admired.

Flood has painted a portrait of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the Negro civil rights leader slain by an assassin's bullet April 4. The portrait started out as a commercial project, but now it's a token of respect.

And just as important to the Negro ballplayer, he feels it's the finest and most expressive work he ever has done.

"This is one of the rare instances," Flood declared, "where I integrated my own feelings about the subject. This is more expressive because there's more of me in it. I started other portraits with something somebody else liked, whether I liked it or not."

The project started when a calendar company asked Flood to paint King's portrait. Flood hesitated for a while because of strong personal feelings.

"I didn't want to have it done in poor taste," Flood recalled, "because this was a great man. But they assured me it would be done in good taste. We decided in the beginning that Mrs. King should have it. I just wanted to do it the best way—whichever was best for her. It's something she ought to have."

The big problem, of course, was that Flood had nothing to work from. He usually works from a color photograph supplied by whoever commissions a work.

"We researched all areas where color photos of him were available," Flood explained. "But we couldn't get any, so I had to go to you (The Associated Press) for black and white ones.

"I don't know exactly what I wanted," Flood murmured. "I met him several times and had seen him, so I had my own impression of him. But I wanted a compound of him in different moods. The end product was—how do I describe it—warm, almost distant from me, a very meditative mood."

From its beginning as a relatively insignificant commercial project to a personal token, Flood's portrait of Dr. King is now part of what might be a more meaningful tribute.

There is to be a benefit concert in Atlanta this fall in Dr. King's honor.

A number of show business personalities and standouts in other fields are to perform at or attend the fall concert. Flood himself will miss the benefit because he will be with the Cardinals on a goodwill tour of Japan.

Flood told former major league catcher Bob Uecker about the portrait. It was Uecker, now an Atlanta Braves official, who suggested the tie-up between the portrait and the concert. Uecker discussed the portrait with the Braves. They were so enthused about the idea they suggested that 8-by-10 color reproductions of the portrait be handed out to the audience.

"The money from the concert will be channeled into areas where Dr. King would have wanted," Flood explained. "There's one thing that has to be worked out. Everything else is worked out except whether the portrait should be given to her (Mrs. King) privately or in the (Atlanta) Stadium. I just want to do it the best way for her."

Flood grinned slightly when he thought about the six pictures the AP had provided. "I didn't particularly like them. As a matter of fact, none of them was really what I wanted. But I had enough of both sides of his face to get exactly what I wanted.

"The mood, though, comes from within yourself," Curt said. "Even before I saw them I had a pretty good idea what I wanted.

"I was satisfied with the end result." Flood paused and added, "It could be the best thing I've ever done—I don't want to sound as if I have a long line of these.

"It was the most rewarding because the end product was probably the best work "I've ever done," Flood said, "when something happens like that (King's assassination) your feeling is what can you do and generally you can't do anything.

"But I feel we owe this family a great deal" he added and I feel this is my small step in the right direction."

S-H Players Enroll In Cage Camp

Two Sacred Heart Gremlin cagers have enrolled in Ed Macauley's basketball camp, to be held in St. Louis Aug. 12-20.

They are K. Edward Gonser, son of Dr. and Mrs. Karl Gonser, 1619 West Broadway, and Jim Wanserski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wanserski, 1632 West Seventh.

They will join Larry Bybee of LaMonte from this area at the camp.

Participants at the camp will study and practice the fundamentals of basketball — jump shooting, ball handling, dribbling and passing, and handling the ball against a zone press, among others.

More than 120 boys are enrolled at the camp.

NBC Tourney Will Start In Wichita

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — State champions from Missouri, Mississippi, Texas and Kansas will meet in the opening games of the National Baseball Congress 34th annual National Tournament in Wichita Friday night.

The double-elimination tournament will bring together 32 teams headed by the defending champion Boulder, Colo., Collegians.

The competition will get under way at 6:15 p.m., Friday with a game between the winners, as yet not decided, of state meets in Missouri and Texas. The tournaments at Mexico, Mo., and Lubbock, Texas, are scheduled to wind up Sunday.

The Liberal, Kan., Beejays and the Jackson, Miss., Braves will meet at 9:15 p.m.

Boulder, seeded no. 1, has won the national title the past two years. The Colorado team hold the tournament record for the most consecutive victories, a total of 14—established last year when it defeated the Honolulu, Hawaii, Islanders in the championship game. Honolulu is seeded no. 2 this year.

The schedule for Saturday, Aug. 10:

5:30 p.m. — Arkansas champion vs. Nebraska champion.

8 p.m. — Oklahoma champion vs. Fargo, N. D.

10 p.m. — Iowa Champion vs. New Mexico Champion.

Independents Play In Jefferson City

The Sedalia Independents softball team will travel to the capital city tonight to cross bats with the KLIK softball team in a doubleheader, the first game beginning at 7 p.m.

The KLIK softball team represents the radio station in Jefferson City.

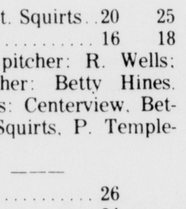

The Sedalia club has been idle the past week, after a game with Centerview had to be rescheduled and an encounter with Alma cancelled.

J. Werneke and J. Chandler will do the pitching for the locals, with Cramer and Estes receiving.

The Independents will play at home next Sunday night, then will be idle until fair week. They have 12 more scheduled games before school starts.

SHAVING STROKES

by Frank Beard

41---Uphill And Downhill

Written for Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Hitting uphill and downhill lies are similar in basic technique. In both instances, body framework assumes the same angle of the ground. Uphill, for example, the body rocks up and the swing is level, as if hitting from flat terrain.

On an uphill situation, more club is needed because the ball must be hit higher into the air than normal to gain loft.

In this year's National Open at Oak Hill in Rochester, N.Y., I had an uphill shot on the ninth hole of the second round. It was about 170 yards to the pin. Normally, this is a five-iron shot for me. But I used a four-iron to get on the green.

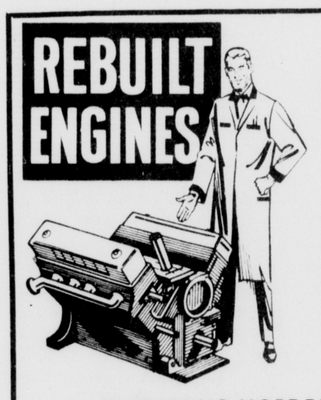

In this case, the green was also elevated. But had the green been level and my position been on the downhill side, I would have used a six-iron.

Chose Csonka As Most Valuable

.... By JERRY LISKA ....
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Csonka, latest and greatest among Syracuse's legendary fullbacks, was an overwhelming choice Saturday as most valuable collegiate player in the All-Stars' begrudging 34-17 loss to the world pro champion Green Bay Packers.

In the traditional press box poll after the 35th All-Star game at Soldier Field Friday night, battering ram Csonka received a landslide vote of 61 ballots in 79 cast for the most valuable distinction.

Split end Earl McCullouch of Southern California, who scored both All-Star touchdowns, and linebacker Fred Carr of Texas-El Paso shared a far distant runnerup spot with four votes each.

Other vote-getters were quarterback Greg Landry of Massachussets (3); MacArthur Lane, Utah State running back (2); guard John Williams of Minnesota (2); linebacker Adrian Young of Southern California (1); guard Bill Leuck of Arizona (1); and kicker Jerry DePoyster of Wyoming (1).

Before the game, All-Star coach Norm VanBrocklin predicted, "I think Csonka will make some impressions on Green Bay — maybe some depressions, too."

After the Packers struck for their third straight victory over the All-Stars, mainly because Bart Starr riddled a gritty, but green collegiate secondary, new Green Bay coach Phil Bengtson conceded:

"That Csonka is a real horse."

Seldom in the long All-Star series has a ball carrier ripped into the big pro front defenses with the power and disdain of Csonka.

The 236-pound Syracuse product, who heads for the Miami Dolphins with greater collegiate credentials than such Orangemen greats as Jim Brown, Ernie Davis and Floyd Little piled up 95 yards on 18 carries for a 5.3 average.

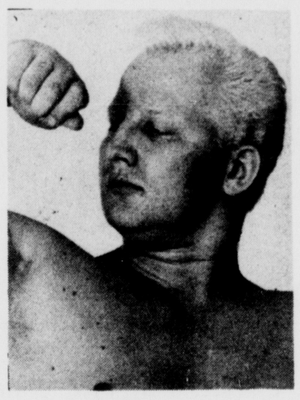

In fact, Csonka's great individual effort helped the not-so-outclassed collegians to an All-Star record of 225 rushing yards, compared with Green Bay's 124. The All-Stars rushed 41 times and Green Bay 31.

The former All-Star ground record was 221 yards, set in the 1950 game when rambling Charlie Justice of North Carolina led the collegians to a 17-7 decision over the Philadelphia Eagles. Van Brocklin, who made his All-Star coaching debut after six seasons at the Minnesota Viking helm, said of Csonka:

"The boy is a real physical specimen with a great attitude. I've seen a lot of big backs who didn't have his quickness and ability to find openings. He has the sense to know when to turn it up and, of course he has tremendous power."

Gil Hayes

Natureboy Kirby

Wrestling Fans Will See Plenty Of Action

Tuesday night promises to be one of action at Liberty Park when the surprise newcomer Gil Hayes takes on Natureboy Kirby in the feature match. Hayes won the right for top billing when Hayes overpowered the tough Bob Brown last week in a match which still has the fans talking.

Hayes proved he "can take it" as well as "dish it out" when he beat Brown so bad he was unable to answer the bell in their death match. He has already asked Gust Karras, promoter, for a championship match with Brown for the Central States Title.

In his meeting with Kirby he has drawn a tough assignment. Kirby loves to maul his opponents into submission. The Hayes-Kirby event should be a real test for the newcomer.

Another startling semi-main event will be a team-tag contest between Bob Brown and Bob Giegel as teammates against Ronnie Etchison and The Spoiler, another newcomer to the area. The Spoiler, making his first appearance here, is a very unorthodox wrestler, but makes a hit with ringsiders with his fancy wrestling. He wears a mask and coveralls.

In a special match former world champion Pat O'Connor will meet The Viking in a one fall match with a 20-minute time limit.

Opening the card, Brown tangles with The Spoiler in a one-fall, 15-minute time limit.

Promoter Karras promises this will be an outstanding exciting card.

Fans Can Start Playing Expansion Name Game

NEW YORK (AP) — If interest in baseball begins lagging about this time because one league has a runaway and the other half a runaway, baseball enthusiasts can always start playing the expansion name game.

The name game is guessing which 15 players each team will protect in the expansion drafts in October.

But for the 20 major league teams, picking the right names won't be a game. It's a job that could have a profound effect not only on the four new teams but on the esisting clubs as well.

The National League will hold its expansion draft first—Oct. 13 in Montreal, site of one of the two new franchises. The other is San Diego. The American League's two new clubs, Kansas City and Seattle, will select their players Oct. 15 in Boston.

All four teams should come out of the drafts with potentially stronger teams than were stocked by Washington and California in 1960 and by New York and Houston in 1961.

The reason for this, as well as for the existing clubs' concern, lies in the difference between the stocking plans for these new teams and the methods by which Washington, California, New York and Houston were stocked.

In the majors' first expansion move—the American League for the 1961 season and the National for 1962—each of the existing 16 teams was able to protect 25 of its 40-man major league roster, and the new teams could select only from the 15 players who remained. In other words, two teams shared an expansion pool of 120 players.

This time the plan is much more attractive for the new teams. Each old club will be able to protect only 15 players from its entire system—major league and minor—for the start of the draft.

Then, after a man is picked, say from St. Louis, the Cardinals can add three more players to their protected list. This method of selection will be used until each new team has 30 players, three from each club.

Still, at the start of the draft, possibly 10 times as many players will be available to the new teams than were up for grabs in 1960 and 1961.

The headache for the existing clubs stems from the decision of whom to protect. Take, for example, the world champion Cardinals, who are making a farce of the National League race.

You could run down their 25-man roster and easily find 15 players you would protect if you were General Manager Bing Devine.

Start with Bob Gibson, Lou Brock, Orlando Cepeda and Curt Flood, and Nelson Briles, Steve Carlton, Julian Javier, Tim McCarver, Mike Shannon, Dal Maxvill, Bob Tolan and Ray Washburn and wind up with Larry Jaster, Dick Hughes and Joe Hoerner.

There they are, the 15 players the Cardinals should protect. But wait a minute. What about some of those youngsters in the farm system? Mike Torrez, a right-handed pitcher for Tulsa, for example. And Jim Cosman, a righty at Little Rock. Then, too, there's Steve Huntz, a good-hitting infielder at Tulsa.

Do you leave these youngsters, and others like them, dangling in front of Montreal and San Diego? Or do you protect them, or at least a couple of them, and gamble losing a Tolan or a Hughes?

It's problems like these that confront 20 general managers and their staffs.

Other problems face four other general managers—Marvin Milkes of Seattle, Cedric Tallis of Kansas City, Buzzie Bavasi of San Diego and John McHale of Montreal, although McHale doesn't have the problems yet because he hasn't officially been named the Montreal general manager.

These four men, and their advisers, will have to decide which 30 players to select for their teams. There are two good reasons why they will have to be particularly brilliant about their choices: The players will be the foundation of the teams and they will cost a lot of money.

The National League hasn't determined the cost per player to the new teams, but it's likely the price will be similar to the American League's. Each player Kansas City and Seattle take will cost $175,000. That's a total of $5.25 million for 30 players.

If it's any consolation to the existing teams, each will be reimbursed a total of $1.05 million for the six players it loses.

These figures are well above the money that was paid out in the first expansion. In the AL, California and Washington paid $75,000 each for their players. In the NL the prices ranged from $125,000 to $75,000 to $50,000.

Interestingly enough, only four players remain with the teams that drafted them in the expansion selections—Jim Fregosi and Bob Rodgers of California, Al Jackson of New York and Bob Aspromonte of Houston. Very few others are even with other teams.

One notable example, however, of a drafted player still around is selected by the Angels from the Baltimore roster for $75,000.

Other names, long gone and very likely forgotten, from the earlier expansion drafts include Eli Grba, Roman Mejias, Craig Anderson, Elio Chacon, Choo Choo Coleman, Dutch Dotterer, Chester Boak and Bud Zipfel.

Right now, 20 general managers are worrying about the Chester Boaks and Bud Zipfels of 1968

California Golf Tourney Into Finals

CALIFORNIA — The 18th Annual California Sand-Green Golf Tournament finals are scheduled for today.

Gary Strickfaden, St. Louis, will return to defend the title he has won the past two years. Strickfaden is a former star athlete at California High School who has played on the Missouri University golf team. This past weekend he won the Tipton tournament.

Approximately 150 central-Missouri golfers are expected to be present to try for merchandise prizes and to break two course records.

Ray Hentges, Helias football coach, has held the 9-hole record since 1963 when he shot a 26 on the par-36 course. Three golfers are tied for the low 27-hole total of 92. They are: Richard Poe, Rolla; Twink Landwehr, Jefferson City, and Wally Morris, Jr., California.

Qualifying started last Monday and continued prior to 9 a.m. this morning. Prizes will be awarded in five flights late Sunday afternoon. Jack Bowlin is this year's tournament chairman for the host club.

Kansas Citian Dies in Crash

COFFEYVILLE, Kan. (AP)—One man was killed and four persons were injured when their car went out of control on U.S. 169 Friday night.

Dead is Willie Jackson, 21, Kansas City, a passenger in a car driven by James R. Jackson. The driver and Anderson Jackson, 19, both of Kansas City, were treated and released from the Coffeyville hospital. Admitted to the hospital were Beverly Jackson, 16, Kansas City, and Patricia Jackson, 11, of Tulsa. Their condition was not immediately known.

Highway Patrolman Larry Mossman said he was pursuing the car when it went out of control just north of Coffeyville and overturned.

Pollsters

were the Republican candidate and Hubert Humphrey were the Democratic candidate and George Wallace of Alabama were the candidate of a third party, which one would you like to see win?"

The question was repeated as between Nixon and Sen. Eugene McCarthy, and between Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Humphrey and McCarthy.

From July 26-29, the Harris poll did almost the same thing, wording the questions in similar terms.

A spokesman for Gallup said replies were obtained from 1,156 registered voters. Harris pollsters received 1,346 answers.

The experts maintain that the scientific nature of the polling is such that, in Harris' words: "It doesn't matter if we use 3,000, 30,000, 300,000 or three millions. A sample of 2,000 or 3,000 is as reliable as a sample many times that number."

Gallup has put it this way: Suppose you have two barrels of marbles, one with 5,000 white marbles and 5,000 black marbles, the other with 500,000 of each color. If you draw 10 marbles from either barrel, your chances of getting five black and five white are about the same.

On the basis of these July polls, Gallup on Monday gave Nixon 40 per cent of the vote to 38 per cent for Humphrey, and a slightly better ratio against McCarthy. Rockefeller ran even with Humphrey and only one point ahead of McCarthy.

Rockefeller has based his campaign for the Republican nomination on an attempt to convince convention delegates he is more popular with he voters than the former GOP vice president.

Consequently, the New York governor expressed himself as baffled by the Gallup findings. Rockefeller said: "It's so out of keeping with the trends that it's very hard to explain. But one Gallup doesn't make a race."

Then on Wednesday came the Harris poll—giving Rockefeller a 40-34 edge over Humphrey and the same over McCarthy. Nixon ran behind both Democrats.

The difference between the two polls represented a change of about 2.8 million votes, based on the 70.6 million votes in the 1964 presidential election.

The disparity was so striking that Harris called Gallup and suggested a joint effort, involving plotting their separate polls in sequence as thought they had been conducted by a single organization.

Lumping their figures together, they then said in a statement Thursday that Rockefeller had moved into "an open lead" over Humphrey and McCarthy, while Nixon as the GOP nominee might find himself in "an extremely close race."

As for the separate polls, the Gallup-Harris statement said: "Public opinion changes over time, and each was an accurate reflection of the opinion at the time it was taken."

Czechs Force Soviets To Defend Absolutism

MOSCOW (AP) — Intellectual dissent inside the Soviet Union and the liberal trend in Czechoslovakia have forced Soviet communism into an awkward defense of its policy of absolute rule.

The bland insistence by former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev of the popularity of the Communist party system has given way to blunt reminders that the party's control cannot be challenged.

"Any attempt to question the leading role of a Communist party, irrespective of the peculiarity of the situation on which this is based, inevitably creates a threat to the Socialist (Communist) system. . ."

That statement from an editorial in Pravda, the Soviet Communist party newspaper, means that any opposition is dangerous.

The statement appeared in a tough attack on Czechoslovak liberalization. The Kremlin has been worried about freedom of the press in Prague and the new tendency of opposition groups to pressure the Czechoslovak Communist party.

One reason for this worry, which led to the massive Soviet pressure on Prague and threatening military moves, was the possibility that Czechoslovakia might cease to be a cooperating member of the Soviet bloc.

But probably more important in the Kremlin's view, many diplomatic observers here think, was the possibility that the new freedoms given to Czechoslovaks might be hard to deny to Soviet citizens. Liberalization could be an infectious disease, potentially fatal to the Soviet system.

Thus the situation is presented to the Soviet people in stark terms:

Either they submit themselves to what they are told is the exploitation of the bourgeois upper classes, or they govern themselves with "working class democracy."

"Socialist democracy" means that the Communist party, the leading element of the working class, holds power and the party, operating under "Leninist centralism," is run by a handful of men in the Kremlin who control the choice of their subordinates and successors.

Anyone who questions this is threatening the Communist system—reason enough to silence him.

MAJOR LEAGUE RESULTS

Cubs 3, Cards 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The red hot Chicago Cubs struck for three runs in the first inning and held off the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 Saturday for their fifth successive victory.

Winner Bill Hands, 12-6, and reliever Phil Regan limited the National League leaders to six hits. Regan working out of a ninth inning jam to preserve the Cubs' seventh victory in their last eight starts.

Randy Hundley's two-run single off St. Louis starter Ray Washburn capped the Cubs' first inning burst after Washburn wild pitched one run home.

The Cardinals countered with a run in the bottom of the first when Lou Brock singled, stole second and scored on Roger Maris' single.

They closed the gap against Regan in the ninth on an error by shortstop Don Kessinger, a ground out and Mike Shannon's run-scoring single before a ground out and Mike Shannon's run-scoring single before the Cub relief ace fanned Julian Javier for the final out.

Regan replaced Hands at the start of the Cards' eighth after the Chicago starter had vielded four hits. The loss snapped a seven-game winning streak for Washburn, 10-4.

BOSTON (AP)—Ken Harrelson, the American League's RBI leader, drove in three runs with his 26th homer and a double powering the Boston Red Sox to an 8-3 victory over the California Angels Saturday in the matinee of a day-night doubleheader.

Twins 4, Tigers 0

MINNEAPOLIS - ST. PAUL (AP) — Dean Chance tamed Detroit's American League leaders on four hits Saturday and got strong hitting support from Rich Reese and Ron Clark in pitching Minnesota to a 4-0 victory over the Tigers.

Despite the loss, the Tigers remained six games ahead of the second place Baltimore Orioles, who bowed to New York 3-1.

Chance permitted only one Detroit runner to reach third base in leveling his record at 10-10. It was his 10th complete game and fourth shutout. He struck out five of the first nine men he faced and finished with eight strikeouts.

The Twins scored single runs in each the first four innings to give Chance his working margin.

Detroit starter Earl Wilson, tagged for six hits and three runs in three innings, took the loss and is 9-9.

Indians 4, A's 1

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lou Johnson slashed a bases-loaded, two run single and rookie Vicente Romo bailed Sam McDowell out of a seventh inning jame as Cleveland downed Oakland 4-1 Saturday.

Johnson's fifth inning single was the only hit in a three-run Indians' rally against John "Blue Moon" Odom and followed a bases-loaded walk to Billy Harris that forced in the first run of the game. An error by Ted Kubiak and a wild pitch started the rally.

McDowell, 12-9, gave up four hits, including a lead off homer to Dave Duncan in the sixth. He retired the first 13 men in a row until Mike Hershberger walked in the fifth.

Duncan's hit was the first off McDowell and it was followed by an infield hit by Dick Green. Hershberger and Rick Monday singled in the seventh but Romo came on with one out and retired the side with men on first and second.

Tony Horton tagged his ninth homer of the season in the sixth.

Yanks 3, Orioles 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle scored the deciding run on Boog Powell's throwing error in the third inning as the New York Yankees beat Baltimore 3-1 Saturday, ending the Orioles' winning string at four games.

Powell's miscue, which climaxed a two-run New York rally, gave Mel Stottlemyre, 14-8, the victory in a tight pitching duel with the Orioles' Jim Hardin, 13-7.

Bill Robinson stole home in the eighth inning giving the Yanks an insurance run.

Stottlemyre scattered seven hits and blanked the Orioles after the first inning, when they scored on two walks, around a double by Curt Blefary and a force play at second.

State of Missouri)
County of Pettis)

I, J.H. Green, Clerk of the County Court, within and for the County and State aforesaid, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true copy of the Constitutional Ballot, certified to me by the Secretary of State arranged in the order in which it will be printed and used at the Primary Election to be held at the several election precincts, in said County on the 6th day of August, 1968.

CONSTITUTIONAL BALLOT

Special Election, Tuesday, August 6, 1968

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT No. 1

(Submitted by the 74th General Assembly)

☐ For

☐ Against

Adds secretary of state, state auditor, state treasurer, and attorney general, in that order, to follow lieutenant governor, president pro tempore of senate, and speaker of house in line of succession to governor in case of vacancy or disability. Creates board composed of officers in line of succession plus majority floor leader of senate and house which may, by majority vote, declare governor unable to perform his official duties. If governor disagrees, supreme court decides issue.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said Court at office in the City of Sedalia, in said County this 5th day of July, 1968.

Time Has No Meaning

By C.C. MINICLIER
Associated Press Writer

Visitors to Lamu—there are very few—find that time seems to have virtually stopped a few hundred years ago.

Lamu's hayday was during the slave trade. As early as 1822 a British ship visited Lamu in efforts to halt the bartering of humanity but it was not until 1907 that the trade was effectively abolished.

Only three years ago, the provincial commissioner felt it necessary to publicly urge the people of Lamu to work hard with their own hands instead of letting other people work for them while they sat back in idleness.

He said some Arabs still had a misconception, dating to the days when the sultan of Zanzibar administered the island as a protectorate within his 10-mile coastal strip, that Arabs were in a privileged position.

Lamu is isolated from the mainland of Kenya by miles of mangrove swamps. Elephants not infrequently knock out telephone service with the mainland.

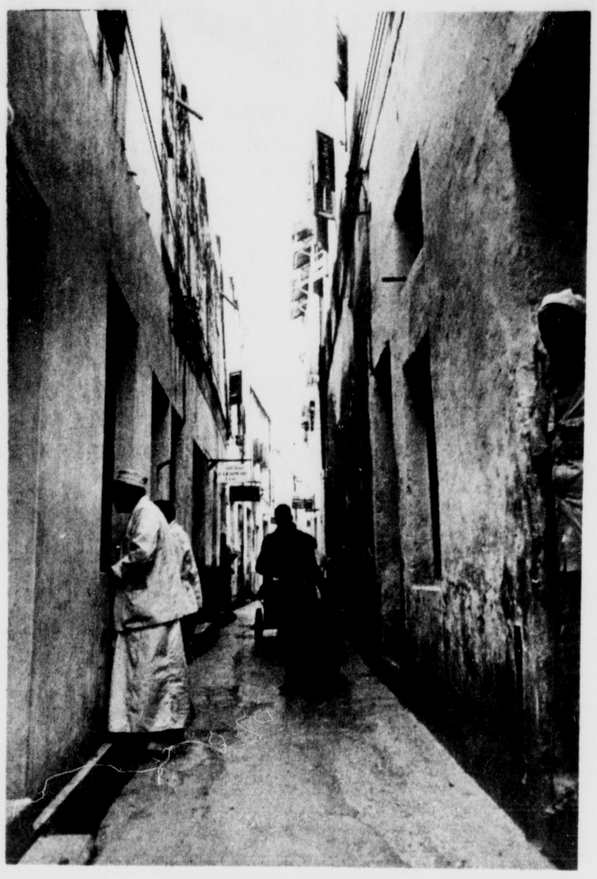

Contact with the outside world is provided by visiting shows from other Kenya ports, Mogadishu, Somalia, Zanzibar and occasionally from Persia and India.

A Dutch-captained boat, Bonanza, picks up cattle on the nearby mainland and passes Lamu on its frequent trips down the coast.

Tourists, mail, and perishables come via air coach or charter flights. The planes land on Manda Island, now without fresh water, and arrivals walk a quarter of a mile to a boat loading for the 10-minute run across to Lamu.

Whether a visitor be from Nairobi, Khartoum or much further away, Lamu is the ideal spot to unwind and relax after the hectic pace of life in the outside world.

It is 22 hours by cattle boat from Mombasa, or 90 miles by air from Malinde, but many years back in time.

Says Police Confiscated Cannon

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Robert Levine says police have seized his mother's antitank cannon.

Levine, 23, said Thursday his mother bought the 20mm cannon for $125. He said she hoped to sell it for $500 in order to hire an attorney to defend Levine on charges of conspiracy to commit murder, attempt to commit murder and shooting at a dwelling.

Levine and a friend were charged after a shot was fired at three youths sitting at a bus stop.

Deputy Sheriff Frank Messersmith said deputies seized the cannon "before it got into the wrong hands" as the result of a newspaper ad offering it for sale.

"We also took about 50 rounds of live ammunition," the deputy said. "That thing could blow hell out of downtown West Palm Beach."

Messersmith said the weapon was confiscated under a federal law which prohibits felons from possessing weapons shipped in interstate commerce.

But Levine, who served two years in prison for aggravated assault, told newsmen that the gun belongs to his mother and that is legal.

Covington, Ky., has a Catholic church which has seats for only three people, said to be the world's smallest church.

Cars Play Large Role In Career

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Automobiles play an important part in the television career of Detroit-born Martin Milner.

There were the four years, starting in 1960, of "Route 66," an action series notable for the fact that although Milner and co-star George Maharis played a pair of penniless wanderers, they always were driving the latest model of their automobile sponsor's sports car.

Now there is "Adam 12," an upcoming NBC series in which producer Jack Webb will explore the work day of uniformed men of the Los Angeles Police Department in somewhat the same realistic understated way he has handled his "Dragnet."

Milner is teamed this time with Kent McCord. They play a pair of cops patrolling their beat in a squad car.

After accepting the part of senior officer Pete Malloy a year ago, Milner logged 200 or more hours in the field, tagging along with real policemen in cruiser cars. Dressed in civilian clothes and mildly disguised behind a pair of heavy horn-rimmed glasses Milner watched and made notes as the men handled situations that ranged from murder to accidents. His first encounter was with a violent psychopath threatening to kill his wife and mother-in-law.

Just as "Dragnet" over the years has been as void of violence as "The Donna Reed Show" in spite of its subject matter, so too will be "Adam 12."

"We've got six shows in the can now," said Milner, "and although there have been some shots fired, no one has been hit. I haven't fired a gun and no one has used fists."

The series, again like "Dragnet," has the blessing of the local police force, and its stories will be based on real Los Angeles cases. In many cases policemen involved in a case adapted to television will serve as consultants in their off-duty time.

Milner, his wife and four children live in suburban area of Los Angeles where a hot political fight is brewing.

"I have a definite preference between the two men," Milner said, "and I certainly feel that actors like other people have a right to make their political choices known. But I'm going to stay quiet about this one, because by November a lot of people are going to think about me as a Los Angeles policeman."

Durrill Family Host Gathering

Mr. and Mrs. Elvis Durrill, Michael and Malinda, Southwood Acres, Route 2, Sedalia, were host to a reunion of the Durrill family Saturday evening, July 27.

Those attending were Mr. Durrill's mother, Mrs. O. E. Durrill, Sedalia; Mr. and Mrs. Milton Durrill, Allan, Randy and Rusty, Mr. and Mrs. Erney Durrill and Tommy, Green Ridge; Miss Sharlette Durrill, Warrensburg; Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Durrill, Miami, Fla.; SM-Sgt. and Mrs. James Durrill and Eddie, Dover, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carrito and Stephen, Kansas City.

Friends of the family attending were: Bill Johns, St. Louis; Miss Joyce Oehrke, Sedalia. The distant guests visited with members of the family over the area before returning to the east.

'Dual Authority' Raises Questions for Chaplains

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Military chaplains are subject to two authorities—their unit commanders and their religious calling. The question often is raised today about whether the dual directions work together.

The practice by which clergymen are put in uniform, commissioned, paid and controlled by the armed forces, is "fundamentally incompatible with faithful performance of their sacred mission," says the American Jewish Congress.

It urges a change to a civilian chaplaincy to American troops. The matter also has come up in other religious circles, and the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. recently gathered reactions about it from chaplains themselves.

"I don't preach LBJ doctrine and don't have to," said one of them. "The men want to hear the Gospel. The assumption that we aren't free is absurd."

Said another: "The sooner the churches revise the entire system, the better it will be. A definite decision about our primary allegiance is called for. Will it be God first or nationalism first?"

At present, about 4,100 American clergymen are in uniform, serving as chaplains in the Army, Navy and Air Force at bases in this country and abroad, and on the battlefields of Vietnam.

They include about 1,071 Catholic priests, 68 rabbis and 2,966 Protestant and Orthodox clergymen. They have officer's rank, receive government pay, and are under military regulations.

Although the U.S. Constitution bars any establishment of religion, the military chaplaincy has existed since the time of the American Continental Army.

In regard to various questions about the system, the United Presbyterian Church's Department of Chaplains and Service Personnel has issued a report entitled "The Military Chaplaincy—Captive or Free?"

It consists largely of responses from chaplains in the field. They are not quoted by name, as the replies were considered private. Their ranks ranged from Army captain to colonel to Navy lieutenant commander.

On the question of whether the military structure inhibited them from proclaiming the pure Gospel and whether they were free to preach the church's concern for peace and the full Lordship of Christ, here are some responses:

"—Some are willing to speak their minds, others are willing to settle for security."

—"I'm an infantry chaplain in Vietnam. I have preached against war, even the war in Vietnam. The pulpit from which I preach has been free, is free and always will be free. Command has never called me down. Command, in fact, attends church."

Asked if they're obliged to support military-government policies and use officially approved courses on morale building and whether the material is in keeping with their convictions, some of them said:

—"The character guidance program has its canned materials but no honest chaplain gives it as packaged. The program is basically a command responsibility, with the chaplain as one of the instructors."

—"I agree that a lot of the materials are 'canned'—canned corn. The troops don't like corn. They prefer more open and vital discussions. The troops are not easily 'snowed.'"

—"Chaplains are not a group of brainwashed clergymen serving as rationalizers of everything the government and the military do."

—"They bump heads with commanders and establishment at times. If not, they fail first as men."

Asked if the church itself should take over management and financing of civilian chaplains to the armed forces, some said:

"The church does not have the financial resources. It would cost approximately $54 million just for salaries."

"One cannot assign a civilian with the military who is not subject to the rules of the military."

"If I were a soldier looking for help, I would want a chaplain who knew the workings of the organization inside out. I would not feel very easy with someone physically present but not really part of the machinery."

Small Twig Causes Big Power Failure

WESLACO, Tex. (AP) — A sparrow that dropped a small twig at an electrical station caused a 26-minute power failure Thursday in the business district and a residential area of this Rio Grande Valley city.

Dick Norton, manager of Central Power and Light Co., said when the twig hit an insulator it caused a 69,000-volt flashover which destroyed three insulators and blew out two 69,000-volt fuses.

BPWC Plans For Coming Year At Dinner Meeting

Plans for the year ahead were presented Thursday evening at the dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club, at Bothwell Hotel, by the chairmen of the various committees under the general program chairman, Mrs. Mary Anderson.

Mrs. Anderson, using the 1968 program theme "All Systems Go, United, Share, Act," presented the committee chairmen as follows:

Mrs. Ruth Gregory, world affairs chairman, explained that this committee was to provide leadership and understanding in world affairs and to promote better understanding among the women of all nations.

The membership chairman, Mrs. Betty Blackwell, cleverly made clear her cause with the motto she selected and picked up the sign that she had brought along with one word in big black letters: "Help." She pointed out that she needed the help of all members of the club in accomplishing the goal of getting the required number of new members for state awards for the club.

In civic participation Mrs. Helen Ream told of the survey completed in regards to the women in jury service. She told of other committee plans for the coming year.

Miss Margaret Ferguson, chairman of the legislation committee, presented the petition sponsored by the Jaycees to bring the charter form of government to the vote of the people. The petition, she explained, is to have this placed on the ballot to be presented to the public.

Mrs. Mary Whiteside, personal development chairman, stated that this committee is to promote personal growth of members and to encourage personal development among young girls of the community.

Mrs. Marguerite Scott, chairman of the memorial scholarship committee, stressed the importance of this committee in helping young women of the community further their education by loaning money, at only 2 per cent interest, to girls who sincerely wanted to continue their education in their chosen careers. They do not need to start paying the loan back until six months after they are established in their employment.

Mrs. Mary Kay Hunter, public relations chairman, stated that it was necessary to have publicity through all news media, and in the state and national magazines of the organization. This committee, she stated, has charge of National Business Women's Week and she felt that this week there should be a club participation program. It is the public relations that assures the club its standing in the community.

The business meeting was presided over by Mrs. Nyra Price, president, with invocation by Miss Opal O'Briant.

A report of the special projects committee was made by the chairman, Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson, who told of the success of the Street Bazaar Day booth which brought a total of $70.72.

The special music chairman, Mrs. Mary Lou Waldrep, presented her sister-in-law, Mrs. Donald Barnes, who sang: "Cruel War," "Shadow of Your Smile" and "I'm in Love with a Wonderful Guy." She was accompanied by Connie Cordes.

Guests introduced by Mrs. Mary Whiteside were: Mrs. Beverly Glenn, guest of Mrs. Dorothy Mitchell; Mrs. John Boul, guest of her mother, Mrs. Nyra Price; Miss Frances Ward and Mrs. Mary Ellis, guests of Mrs. Mary Kay Hunter.

An interesting report of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs was made by Miss Erma Fajen. She and Mrs. Price attended the convention as delegates. Also attending the convention were Miss Hazel Palmer, past national president, and Mrs. Marjorie Garansson, past state president. Miss Palmer also made a report on the convention.

The decorations for the dinner meeting were various items found at the Missouri State Fair as well as posters.

Reports Tell Of Slayings In Red China

HONG KONG (AP)—Travelers from Canton said today more than 10,000 Red Guards in Canton were arrested by the Chinese army and a number of them shot and killed when they resisted arrest.

Other unconfirmed reports said at least 100,000 persons were killed in the factional fighting in Kwangsi and Kwangtung provinces in the past few months.

Canton streets are now filled with Red Guard wallposters accusing the army of suppressing the Cultural Revolution.

The June issue of a Red Guard pamphlet, the "West River Storm Bulletin" said fighting had taken place in all cities and countries in Kwangsi.

The Bulletin said, that half of Wu Chow city, an industrial center in Kwangsi, was burned to the ground and 56 counties were devastated in factional fighting.

The rival Red Guard factions battle each other with all kinds of firearms, including mortars, handgrenades and machine guns. The army and militia are also involved in the fighting, the Bulletin said.

All military shipments for North Vietnam were stopped, after the fighting paralyzed railway transport in Kwangsi, which is the main railway link with North Vietnam.

State Gathers Up Literary Heritage

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — A collection of 3,301 books written by Maine authors has been gathered at the state library. The older volumes are kept under lock and key, and some printed before Maine became a state have hide covers.

Wider Doors At Colleges Called Need

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Colleges and universities must change the structure of higher education to attract and keep average and below-average students.

This was the message delivered by Dr. Robert P. Foster, president of Northwest Missouri State College, at summer commencement exercises at the University of Missouri last night.

Foster said inequities among our people demonstrate the need for a wider diffusion of knowledge, and that colleges and universities bear the responsibility for providing higher education for more students.

About 1,200 students received degrees.

First Head Start Graduation Held

The Pettis County Head Start graduation program was held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 1, at Hubbard School, with the little girls wearing pink graduation caps with white tassels and the little boys wearing blue caps with white tassels.

There were 90 children enrolled in the eight-week program which started June 10 with an average attendance of 88 throughout the eight weeks.

The welcome Thursday evening was given by Mrs. Evelyn Rabourn, supervisor, after which Mrs. Patricia DeWitt sang "God Bless America."

The Pledge of Allegiance was given by the Head Start children and audience.

Songs and plays were presented under the direction of Mrs. Phyllis Jensen, Mrs. Lois Gunn, Mrs. Gloria Meredith and Mrs. Patricia DeWitt.

Certificates at this first formal graduation exercise were awarded to the children by Ralph Lee, president of the Pettis County Community Action Corporation.

Special recognition was given to the volunteers and aides by Mrs. Helen Crabb, president of the Parents Advisory Council. The volunteers included a group of teenagers, Caroline Wilson, Charles Homan, Teresa Dowdy, Gayle McCarty, Connie Allen, Virginia Klover, Susan Eisenstein, Jan Hoffman, Joy Herndon, Charlene Bass, Mary Warren and Nancy DeWitt. The many adult volunteers were from the Church Women United.

Mrs. Rabourn presented gifts to Charles Whitney and Alonzo Byrd for their help in the Head Start program.

Introduced were: Dr. and Mrs. Gary Everet, Dr. Everet being the Head Start dentist; and members of the board, Mrs. Elnora Green, Mrs. Alberta Buckner, Harry Naugel and Ralph Lee. Dr. A. R. Maddox was the physician.

Thirteen bus drivers drove the children back and forth each day with an accident-free record, and were recognized.

A 37-foot mural of animals, painted by one of the teachers, Mrs. Helen Lamb, was across the area in front beneath the stage.

Refreshments were served by the Parents Advisory Council to about 400 people gathered for the program. The table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a white, milk-glass container with an arrangement of blue and pink flowers, with pink and white candles on each side. On the table, also, were two sheet cakes, one blue and one pink, with the lettering "Head Start."

During the eight weeks, Mrs. Rabourn stated, they saw marked improvement in the children who learned to play with each other and cooperate in carrying out activities of the program. Among the activities were field trips and Mrs. Rabourn expressed special appreciation to the Sedalia Police Department, the Sedalia Fire Department, Tullis Hall Dairy and the Sedalia Airport, all assisting in the trips.

Mrs. Ernest Knox was valuable to the program through her story telling, being particularly talented in the telling of children's stories.

Throughout the Head Start hot lunches were served family style by Mrs. Opal Swearngin and Mrs. Bessie Sims, who had been employed during the eight weeks.

The Head Start program ended Friday when the children were taken on a tour of the Missouri State Fairgrounds and saw the animals at the conservation area. A picnic had been planned at Liberty Park but because of the rain the children were taken back to Hubbard School where they ate their sack lunches.

The Head Start program here, which is for pre-school children, was evaluated by three evaluators. One was regional and the others national from the Office of Economic Opportunity, and they were all well pleased, Mrs. Rabourn said.

E. L. "Red" Birdsong, Democratic Encumbent

Judge-Pettis County Court, Eastern District

My background in brief:

- Resident of Pettis County for more than 40 years.
- My wife and I reared and educated our three sons and one daughter in Pettis County.
- Member of Salem and Smithton School Boards for 23 years.
- Member of Pettis County Heart Council for past 16 years.
- Member State County Court Judges Ass'n. and of the Legislative and Auditing Committees. Objective: Better County Government through an exchange of ideas.
- Helped to establish Pettis County Fire Department.
- Helped to establish Buena Vista Home for our older people, which has saved Pettis County taxpayers thousands of dollars, since it is nearly self-sustaining.
- I have worked for and voted to keep Pettis County on a current and cash basis in all of its affairs. Only 46 of 114 counties are in such a good fiscal condition.
- Treasurer of Central Missouri County Court Judges Association.
- Since my election as county judge, I have advocated, voted for, supported and worked for, the good county roads we enjoy today.
- Pettis County now ranks third of Missouri's 114 counties in all-weather roads—surpassed only by Jackson and St. Louis Counties, a decided improvement since my first term on the Pettis County Court.
- Member of Missouri Good Roads Association.
- In 1954, I voted to reduce the General Revenue Tax Levy from 50¢ to 47¢ — the tax rate today — a savings of $3.00 per $100 assessed valuation each year for fourteen years.

IF NOMINATED AND ELECTED, I promise to continue to serve all citizens of Pettis County to the best of my ability and to continue to administer county affairs fairly and economically.

Mrs. Larry Layne George

Jo Ann Lowe, Larry George Wed in Afternoon Ceremony

Miss Jo Ann Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Lowe, St. Louis, became the bride of Larry Layne George, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. George, Neosho, in a candlelight ceremony at Normandy Methodist Church, St. Louis, Saturday, Aug. 3 at 4 p.m. The couple spoke their vows before a background setting of palms, arrangements of bridal flowers and standards of seven-branch candelabra. Aisle candles spaced at intervals were entwined with greenery and marked the family pews.

The Reverend Raymond A. Van Giesen performed the double ring ceremony and the program of nuptial music was provided by Mr. Steve Lewis, organist, and Mrs. Betty Craig, who sang "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing," "I Love Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose a gown of gardenia white peau de soie fashioned with scoop neckline and elbow length sleeves. Alencon lace and seed pearls in an embroidered pattern highlighted the bodice of the gown and was repeated on the long A-line skirt. A detachable chapel train, embroidered like the gown, fell softly from lace panels at the shoulder. Her petal headpiece, fashioned of lace and seed pearls secured a silk illusion veil and she carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations and stephanotis centered with an orchid.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Jerry Greeven, Fort Knox, Ky., sister of the groom and the bridesmaids were attired in identical ensembles of nile green chiffon designed with scoop necklines and short sleeves. Their empire styled dresses featured a bodice of venise lace, and a flowing panel fell gracefully to the hemline of the slender skirt. Tiny veils with matching nile green headpieces completed their costume. Their flowers were a nosegay of white carnations tinged with green. Bridesmaids were: Mrs. Joseph Lawson, St. Louis, sister of the bride, and Miss Cynthia Culp, Deland, Fla., cousin ot the bride, a junior bridesmaid.

The bridegroom chose Pfc. Jerry Greever, Fort Knox, Ky., his brother-in-law, as bestman. Robert Brandes, Jr., Warrensburg, was a groomsman, while Gary George, Neosho, his brother, and Joseph Lawson, St. Louis, served as ushers. Miss Monica Bauer, St. Louis, was the flower girl and Mark Bauer, St. Louis, was the ring bearer. Miss Kathryn George and Miss Penny George, both of Neosho, sisters of the groom, served as the candle lighters.

The mother of the bride chose a champagne lace sheath featuring a small collar and ruffled jabot with long sleeves ending in a graceful ruffle at the wrist, with matching accessories. Her corsage was a single white orchid. The bridegroom's mother selected a brown sheer A-line dress accented with white eyelet embroidery and white accessories. Her corsage was also a white orchid.

At the reception which followed in Fellowship Hall, the bride's table was covered with a white satin cloth and centered with the wedding cake, accented with rosebuds tinted green. Silver candelabra holding tall white tapers, English ivy and arrangements of white and green tinged flowers were used in the decorations. A silver coffee service and a crystal punch bowl completed the table appointments.

Following a wedding trip to the Lake of the Ozarks, the couple will reside in Bunceton.

The groom is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar George, Sedalia, and Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Layne, Bunceton.

Mr. and Mrs. William Orvis Crouch

Double Ring Vows Unite Pate, Crouch, July 19

The New Hope Baptist Church was the setting for the July 19 wedding uniting in marriage Miss Connie Lea Pate to Mr. William Orvis Crouch. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis Pate, 616 East 12th; and the groom is the son of Mrs. Mary Jo Crouch, 1530 South Harrison, and the late Orvis William Crouch. The Rev. Marvin T. Nobles performed the evening double ring ceremony before a large altar spray of white and yellow gladioli and mums.

Miss Phyllis Jones, LaMonte, accompanied Miss Carol Crouch, cousin of the groom, as she sang "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer." Lighting the candles was Miss Rita Pate.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride selected a floor-length gown allover lace backed to satin. White bows were featured at the empire waistline and shoulders and a georgette train flowed softly from the back. Her short pouf veil was secured by a satin cabbage rose and she carried a cascade arrangement of yellow and white roses and gladioli.

Miss Lois Crouch, sister of the bridegroom, attended as maid of honor in a lemon-shaded suitdress accented by couturier clasps. She carried a colonial bouquet of carnations.

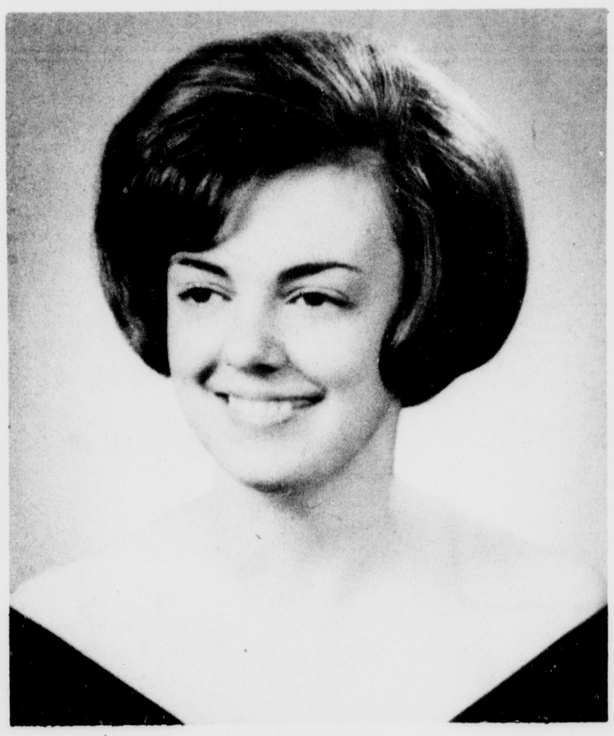

John Hicks served as best man with Gary Pate and Randy Ulmer performing ushering duties.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Pate selected a blue eyelet dress and black patent accessories. Mrs. Crouch chose a dress in blue also; her accessories were white. Each mother wore a corsage of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church auditorium with 200 guests offering congratulations. The three-tiered bridal cake was served by Miss Carol Henderson and Miss Venita Hicks. Miss Atona Kay Pate, Smithton, registered guests.

For a wedding trip to the Branson area, the bride wore a pale yellow dress with black straw accessories. On their return the couple will be at home at the Oak Tree Manor Mobile Home Court.

The bride is a student at the Sedalia School of Hairdressing and the groom, a 1966 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School, is employed by Klassic Manufacturing Co.

Miss Catherine Reid

Mr. and Mrs. A.P. Reid, Houstonia, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Catherine, to Mr. Terry Pummill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Pummill, Houstonia. Miss Reid is a graduate of Northwest High School at Hughesville and attended Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg. She is employed at Sedalia Industrial Loan and Investment Co. Pummill also graduated from Northwest High School and attends Central Missouri State College. The Wedding date has been set for Sept. 7.

The Complexion Diet

Fames beauty experts say the best foods to keep skin young and beautiful are those with a high content of vitamin B 1 such as yellow vegetables and fruit — carrots, wax beans, squash, peaches, apricots, etc. Too many starches, as well as tobacco and alcohol, play a large part in producing a dull and lifeless complexion.

Couple Exchange Nuptial Vows In Candlelight Service, Aug. 3

Mrs. Walter Morgan Rozier Jr.

Before an altar arrangement of spider mums and brass spiral candelabra Miss Pamela Kay Jones, daughter of Reverend and Mrs. Hugh A. Jones, Springfield, became the bride of Walter Morgan Rozier, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Rozier, 1704 South Engineer. The Reverend Hugh Jones, father of the bride, read the double ring vows in an evening ceremony Aug. 3, at the Dale Street Methodist Church, Springfield.

Mr. William Hickman provided a prelude of traditional nuptial music on the organ and accompanied Mrs. Jack Gist, Springfield, singing "Hand In Hand" and "More." Candles were lighted by Miss Chris Blair, Camdenton, and Dale Rozier, brother of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride appeared in a floor length gown of white crepe featuring an empire yoke and long sleeves of embroidered Venise lace. The detachable chapel train was accented with Venise appliques and heavy border trim. A flowerlet headpiece, scattered with seed pearls, secured her three-tiered veil of imported illusion and she carried a bouquet of white roses and stephanotis surrounding a gardenia.

Miss Pamela Finkenbinder, Springfield, sorority sister of the bride, was selected maid of honor. Her floor length slim dress of chiffon over taffeta in a shade of French turquoise, featured a tiny bowed neckline. A French bow with maline veiling matching her dress formed the headpiece and she carried a nosegay of pale blue daisies. Miss Ellen Blair, Camdenton, and Miss Debbie Rozier, sister of the groom, also attended the bride.

Mr. Bob Reese was best man and acting groomsmen were Hugh A. Jones II, Houston, Tex., brother of the bride; Woodie Craighead, and Donald Rozier, brother of the groom. Seating the guests were Steve Lewis and Mike Kempton.

Carmen Moore, cousin of the bride was flower girl and Randy Rozier, brother of the groom carried the rings.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Jones wore a powder blue silk suit with matching accessories. Mrs. Rozier chose a white lace skimmer dress with navy accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of red roses.

Following the ceremony the couple received 200 guests in the church fellowship hall. A three-tiered wedding cake decorated with pale blue roses and topped with the miniature bride and groom centered the bridal table. Misses Jackie White, Paula Geringer, and Donna Brock, all of Springfield assisted with the serving and Miss Jeanne Smay, Springfield, took charge of the guest book.

For a wedding trip to the Lake of the Ozarks, the bride traveled in a multi-colored skimmer dress with tangerine-colored accessories. A white gardenia corsage was lifted from her bridal bouquet.

The bride attended Southwest Missouri State College, Springfield, and is employed at Sears Roebuck and Co. Rozier, a 1966 graduate of Smith-Cotton High School attended Central Missouri State College and is employed by K W Electric Co. The couple will be at home at 1920 South Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hurt

Honor LaMonte Couple On Golden Wedding Day

To commemorate the 50th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hurt, LaMonte, their children held open house the afternoon of July 28 at the Wesley Methodist Church.

A tiered cake decked with golden roses centered the table which was covered with a lace cloth over gold. Gilded tapers flanked the arrangement. Serving for the occasion were Miss Sandra Sue Hammond, Kansas City and Mrs. Alan Hedgpeth, Denver, Colo. Miss Cindy Sue Carroll, Denver, Colo., was in charge of the guest book. A host of friends and relatives were on hand to offer good wishes.

The Hurts were married July 27, 1918 at the Fifth Street Methodist Church, now the Wesley Methodist Church. Mrs. Hurt is the former Myrtle Gibson, daughter of John and Alice Cole Gibson. Hurt is the son of Boone and Melinda Haley Hurt.

All three of the couple's children were at the celebration. They are Mrs. Richard (Faye) Green, Denver, Colo.; Mrs. Dan (Virginia) Jasper, Lincoln, and Mrs. Lewis (Bessie Rae), Hammond Jr., Sedalia. There are seven grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Able to attend the event, in addition to those mentioned were Alan Hedgpeth, and the great granddaughter, Melissa Kay Hedgpeth, Denver, Colo.

Kitchen Designs Show Spanish Influence Grows Each Year

By AILEEN SNODDY
NEA Home Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—A number of interior decorators have been caught with their home furnishings predictions awry. Just as many decided to write off Spanish as a popular design direction for every room of the house it pops up more strongly than ever.

In fact, Spanish and its cousin, Mediterranean, caused a growing number of furniture buyers to click their heels and shout "ole" during the recent Southern Market introductions. It seems the manufacturers and retailers recognize that the so-called Spanish motifs are quite popular with today's homemaker. Spanish and American transitional styles continue to lock horns and vie for a spot in the home.

The importance of Spanish is confirmed with the rash of accessories picking up grille designs, for example. Behind its popularity is a basic that can't be overlooked. Spanish is easy to decorate with.

Although homemakers are more aware of how to put a room together with a reasonable amount of success they still are insecure about it. Spanish, it seems, gives them more confidence than other period styles, especially the great number still scared to tackle decorating with antiques and the elegant French period pieces.

Spanish decor is moving strongly throughout the house. The kitchen is the current spot honored with the massive, mellow woods for cabinets and trim and the wrought iron or washed pewter hardware that adds to the feeling of comfort women like in their kitchens.

Currently, red and gold is a leading color combination for a Spanish-oriented kitchen with deep gold counter tops, brick or tile design in vinyl and ceramic floors. Some women with apartment kitchens with small or no windows create a special effect with the bold dimensional patterned red and gold cafe curtains or use a tie back treatment to highlight a dado of Spanish arches, for example, or a hand-turned wooden railing.

The wooden railing effect also finds a home as a divider for the L-shaped rooms.

Metal or wood cabinets get into the act even if they do not have arches or other Spanish motifs. It is possible to create the designs with paint or stencils.

With all the detailed and intricate designs it is wise to keep a heavy duty spray cleaner at hand to get into the crevices and hard-to-reach areas to lift out grease and soil and keep your Spanish sparkling.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

WHAT'S HAPPENING IN the kitchen? This favored cozy spot in the home reflects major home furnishing trends. Currently quite popular is Spanish-Mediterranean as reflected in the kitchen (left) created by decorating specialists for Cinch. Note the clean arches on wood, wrought iron and pewter hardware and bold print curtain.

Another strong design direction includes the American transitional with its use of simple woods and geometric patterns. The housewife (right) is cleaning her very contemporary carpet tile. It comes in 12-inch squares with latex foam backing. Of polyester olefin, the tiles are vacuumed regularly and shampooed occasionally.

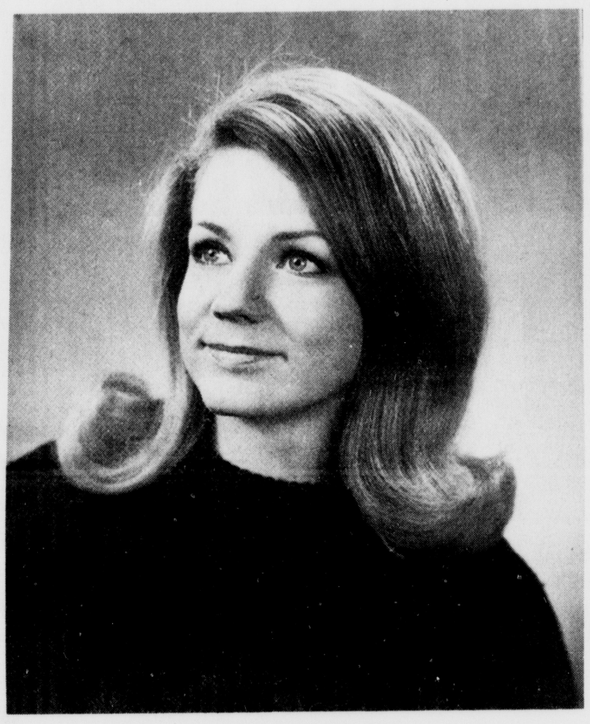

LIKE ANY TOURIST, actress Audrey Hepburn scurries across a street in Rome carrying a shopping purchase. The star was seen bustling around the Italian capital like any other vacationer.

Your Nails Breathing?

Your nails must be allowed to breathe. Are your cuticles grown over the nails or are they loose enough for you to run a toothpick under? That is the place where the nails breathe. If the cuticle is tight, the nails suffocate and turn brittle and form ridges. Use cuticle oil and an orangewood and gently loosen edges. Do not cut cugicles. Only a trained beautician knows how to remove the cuticle properly without causing damage.

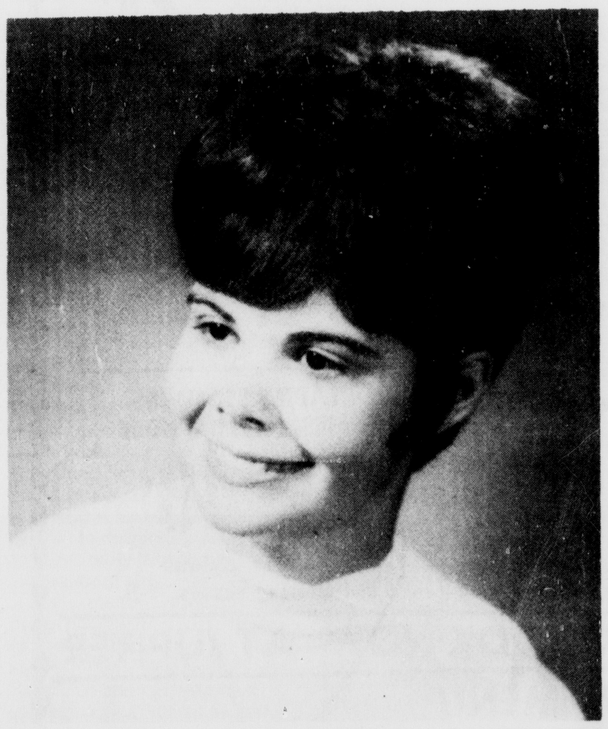

Oil Away Make-Up

Some of the multitude of cosmetics tasks that baby oil performs well include: whisking away make-up quickly, even stubborn eye make-up. A thin film of the oil left on overnight keeps your skin lubricated and helps prevent moisture loss to keep it smooth and soft.

Miss Helen Louise Gardner

Mr. and Mrs. Harold L. Gardner, Independence, announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Louise, to Mr. Ronnie Lee Dugan son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean R. Dugan, Springfield. Miss Gardner is a granddaughter of Mrs. Lawrence Gardner, 1609 South Quincy, Sedalia. The future bride is a senior at Southwest Missouri State College, Springfield, majoring in broadcast journalism and English. She has served on the college board of governors, the student government association, and the college union board. Dugan will graduate in January from SMS with a Bachelor of Science degree in agriculture. An August 24 wedding is planned at St. Peter's United Church of Christ, Kansas City.

Miss Marcia Ann Fricke

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fricke, Houstonia, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marcia, to Mr. Gary Townsend, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Townsend, Hughesville. Wedding plans are incomplete.

Sardines Make Tastier Salads

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food Editor

Here are two delicious cold service ideas, each one using Norway sardines to add a taste spark. Either dish makes a welcome and easy addition to 4th of July casual entertaining.

Individual Smorgasbord: Arrange in the center of a dinner plate a small portion of potato salad in a cluster of lettuce leaves, surrounded by Virginia ham curls, sliced salami, tangy Norway sardines on a bed of pimento, quartered hard-cooked egg, ripe olives, sweet gherkins, stuffed tomato and radish rosettes.

To prepare stuffed tomato: Cut the top off a chilled tomato and scoop out the pulp; place 1 tablespoon of mayonnaise in tomato and add pieces of sardines. Season to taste.

The individual smorgasbord

NORWAY SARDINE ROSEBUD SALAD

1 (3¾-oz.) can Norway sardines
1 can small beets
¼ cup French dressing
3 tablespoons sour cream
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 medium-sized apple, peeled, diced
1 cup chopped celery
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 hard-boiled egg
1 head of lettuce, chopped

METHOD: Put the beets in a small bowl and pour the French dressing over them. Marinate in the refrigerator for about 2 hours. In a separate bowl, combine the sour cream, mayonnaise, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Peel and dice the apple; put immediately into the sour cream mixture to prevent discoloration. Add the celery, onion and flaked Norway sardines. On each salad plate place 4 marinated beets on a bed of chopped lettuce. Spoon the sardine salad in center. Garnish with a slice of hard-cooked egg topped with a thin slice of stuffed olive. Chill before serving. Four servings.

The Comb in Public

The charming and elegant woman never combs her hair in public. Naturally, it goes without saying that if you are at a restaurant or any public place, and a stray strand falls into your face, excuse yourself and go to the powder room for a quick repair job.

Bare Midriffs Here

Maybe you've already whittled down your waist in anticipation of the new fashion trends, but how about the bare midriff? Everybody's midsection is bared! Not only swimsuits and sun clothes, but dresses for evening are revealing an expanse of skin that you have probably been neglecting. So right now is the time to smooth and soften this area of skin with frequent applications of good body lotion. For the evenings, you may smooth on a foundation that blends in with your complexion.

Sudden Ray of Hope to End Starvation in Asia

By TOM STEWART
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A food production "explosion" in India and other "empty-belly" nations offers real hope that they can—by their own efforts rather than handouts—prevent mass starvation in coming years.

Struggling under the double curse of runaway population and inability to meet their own food needs, they have long existed with the threat of famine on a scale the world has never seen.

But in a remarkably short time the experts have switched to the opinion it needn't happen.

"Assuming reasonable monsoons," William S. Gaud, administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said in an interview, "India clearly will be self-sufficient in foodgrains in three or four years—no question about it."

The emerging nations are in the throes of agricultural revolution, fueled by superproductive new hybrid grain varieties developed by U.S. foundations at research centers in the Philippines and Mexico.

They have had such astonishing impact in such a short time that the consensus among food production experts in and out of government is that the technology now can assure any nation self-sufficiency.

The other essential, willingness of the needy nations to take vigorous advantage of this gift of life, is beyond the powers of the scientists. But in the nations where the food-vs.-mouths problem is most critical the response has been excellent.

"Anyone who thinks the problem has now been solved is out of his mind," said Dr. J. George Harrar, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, "but we do now have evidence that it can be done."

As promising as it is, the sudden spring forward in agriculture leaves untouched the companion problem of putting a damper on the rising population curve. But it will buy time, they say, and time is what today's feeble family-planning programs need.

In the meantime, the rush is on to switch to the new high-yielding wheat and rice hybrids.

"The new varieties are to the agricultural revolution in Asia what the steam engine was to the Industrial Revolution in Europe," says Lester R. Brown, administrator of the Department of Agriculture's International Agricultural Development Service.

The Indian government estimates this year's crop of all food grains at 100 million tons, up nearly a third from last year and 12 per cent better than any previous year. The wheat yield is 30 per cent above the old record.

Pakistan also topped its previous best year in wheat by 30 per cent and is scrambling to exploit the new seeds even further. Its importation of 42,000 tons of wheat seed last year will make next year's wheat crop almost 100 per cent the new high-yield strain.

The Philippines, unable to fill its own rice bowls since 1903, became self-sufficient this year and had the heady experience of exporting a little.

Ceylon is actively converting to the new agriculture and so are Iran, Turkey and other nations that refuse to shrug off the results they can see in the countries that switched early.

At the International Rice Research Institute at Los Banos in the Philippines and the International Maize and Wheat Improvement Center in Mexico, one of the researchers' main problems was the tall, weak stems of Asia's existing wheat and rice varieties.

Heavy fertilization caused the gangly stems to grow even taller, allowing the precious heads of grain to droop to the ground to rot or to be eaten by pests.

The target, then, for the researchers: a plant with a short, sturdy stalk, one that would grow well under a wide variety of conditions and be disease-resistant.

That's what they came up with.

The new varieties are from dwarf stock. They demand heavy fertilization but also respond to it handsomely by converting the nutrients to grain, not straw.

"It's the most amazing thing," said Peace Corps official Jack Frankel, "to see the IR8 rice plants standing about half the height of the traditional Philippine varieties with about three times the grain."

Frankel, agricultural program and training specialist for the Peace Corps, feels the miracle in the fields is matched by one in government chambers.

After years of drift and wooliness in its agricultural policies, he said, the government of India is giving agriculture a top priority and spending heavily to assist farmers.

Some of the new businesslike attitude overseas can be traced to a change in the U.S. approach to food assistance. Congress in 1966 wrote a stiff self-help requirement into Public Law 480, which governs food aid.

American PL480 food shipments are now, in effect, swaps for commitments by the recipient nations to make certain improvements in their agricultural programs—dam construction, for instance, or improvement of farm-to-market roads.

The unending line of grain ships from the United States, says India's former minister of agriculture, Shri C. Subramaniam, was a temptation to keep putting off the hard decisions and national belt-tightening necessary to make India's agriculture viable.

"Easy availability of food under PL480 had dulled, in part, the search for self-sufficiency," Subramaniam reported recently when food production experts from around the world met in New York.

The U.S. food, he said, was used by the Indian government to further a cheap-food policy benefiting city dwellers while farm prices were kept unprofitably low.

But "today the boot seems to be on the other leg" and price supports and other previously unthinkable schemes to spur the growers to greater productivity are sweeping India, he said.

Working and Growing

In emerging nations, new hybrid grain variety development is stopping the threat of starvation and hunger to rising populations. While the land and animals of a Pakistani farmer once were barren and empty, this condition is becoming a farmer's paradise, where other farmers thresh a new "miracle" rice strain called IR8. (AP)

A Formidable Challenge For Kentucky Candidate

By SY RAMSEY
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Katherine Graham Peden is an aggressive, charming woman who has "always wanted to be the best in my field"—which at the moment means an attempt to become Kentucky's first woman U.S. senator.

She won Democratic nomination last spring over 11 rivals and hopes to reverse Kentucky's trend of electing Republicans to the Senate for the past 12 years.

WOMAN IN THE RUNNING — At her home in Frankfort, Ky., Katherine Peden seeks to become the first woman U. S. Senator from Kentuky. (AP)

The challenge is formidable. Miss Peden faces Jefferson County (Louisville) Judge Marlow W. Cook, a handsome, articulate vote-gatherer buttressed by the first GOP regime at the state Capitol in 20 years.

The setup is ideal for what Miss Peden calls her inborn competitive spirit and what her enemies regard as annoying egocentricity.

"Nobody bars the door to Katie," a friend commented. "If she wins in November, she'll dream of running for president someday."

Kentuckians seem divided sharply on Miss Peden, who emerged from obscurity in the western Kentucky town of Hopkinsville to achieve national prominence in two fields—as president of the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs and as the only woman an member of the President's Commission on Civil Disorders.

Her friends regard her as the most promising woman politician since Sen. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. They assert she is a natural leader with the perception to diagnose society's ills and the ability to work well with colleagues of either sex.

Her enemies vacillate between poking fun at her purported overconfidence — they nicknamed her "Katherine the Great" in state government — and dismissing her as an Amazonian upstart.

At 42, Miss Peden is a striking woman, with pepper-colored hair, gentle yet shrewd eyes and a healthy outdoors complexion. She stands 5-feet-10 and weighs 170 pounds, "almost as much as my St. Bernard dog."

Growing up on a farm with three brothers, she played baseball with them and helped with tobacco planting.

Miss Peden never went to college. She was an honor student in high school and planned to major in pharmacy at the University of Louisville but had to wait because of lack of housing during World War II.

Instead, on D-Day, she began work for the summer at radio station WHOP in her hometown.

It developed into a 20-year romance with every aspect of broadcasting. She still is vice president of WHOP and also owns WNVL at Nicholasville.

Miss Peden's first taste of politics came through the women's club federation and, along with radio experience, taught her that the two most important elements for success are: "Be interested in people and do your homework."

She encountered a different brand of politics a few years ago when she arrived at Frankfort as state commerce commissioner under former Gov. Edward T. Breathitt, her childhood friend.

Soon she was on a collision course with then Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield regarding who was to control the state's Economic Development Commission. The outcome: Breathitt fired Waterfield from the commission and Miss Peden chalked up another triumph.

Miss Peden announced early this year as a candidate against incumbent Republican Sen. Thurston B. Morton, regarded as a shoo-in for re-election, when practically every Democrat quaked at the thought of opposing him.

Morton decided to retire and there was a stampede of candidates — but too late for Miss Peden's 11 rivals. She was first with the most support and won a respectable plurality.

"I settled the problem of whether a woman could do a job for Kentucky the first six months I was commerce commissioner," she said, "and I didn't have to settle it all over again."

As for marriage, Miss Peden is candid about her status. She thinks a woman can find meaning and happiness without a mate.

"Actually, it's a matter of personal choice. What I may have missed in marriage, I have gained in involvement and travel. I haven't had time to be lonely."

Says World Forgot 'A Nice Old Man'

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One-hundred-year-old Augustus Blaylock was buried at Cherry Hospital cemetery Thursday—77 years after he entered the mental institution.

No surviving relatives could be located, so hospital personnel arranged for the burial with floral arrangements.

"He was just a nice old man that the world had forgotten," said Ida Mae Boyette, the director of nursing.

Another Brother Indicted by Court

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Andrew Joseph Burns, 23, whose sister was discharged from the Marines for refusing to obey orders, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on charges of failure to report for induction.

Burns' sister, Mary Elizabeth, was discharged from the Marines April 18, a month after she began a protest of the Vietnam war. She was court martialed on two counts of refusing to obey orders, including refusing to wear her uniform, and subsequently was fined $20 and reduced from corporal to private.

Mary's twin brother, Timothy, is also facing charges in U.S. District Court in Denver for draft evasion.

Steel Industry Intends to Win

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — For at least the third time in the 1960s the steel industry finds itself confronting the power and ire of a President. Twice it lost. This time, judging by the statements, it intends to win.

"It just shouldn't be permitted to stand," said President Johnson. But Bethlehem Chairman Edmund F. Martin responded: "In our opinion our price increase is absolutely necessary, and we don't intend to withdraw it."

The result could be a compromise, an increase but not of the "slightly less than 5 per cent" announced by Bethlehem. Meanwhile, the test of strength is on.

In the most recent previous confrontation, on New Year's Day 1966, Martin was a quick loser to the administration. His increase on structural steel was called inflationary and unwarranted. He quickly withdrew it.

In the most famous confrontation, beginning April 10, 1962, U.S. Steel, the No. 1 producer, was forced to back down under a relentless barrage of criticism from the administration of President John F. Kennedy.

There are several similarities between the present battle and that 1962 conflict. For one thing, both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson were in the midst of anti-inflation campaigns to which steel price increases, they felt, were serious threats.

Kennedy was making a big pitch for price stability in 1962. Partly to show his good faith—he had been distrusted in some business circles—he openly promised to help the steel industry resist execessive wage increases.

Using his influence with labor, Kennedy and his aides helped obtain what was termed a non-inflationary contract. It called for no wage increase for a year and fringe benefits of only 10 cents an hour.

Hours after Kennedy had sent a letter to the Steelworkers Union praising their "forward looking and responsible" action, Roger Blough, U.S. Steel chairman, drove up to the White House on a courtesy call.

The president or chairman of U.S. Steel doesn't have to personally call on the President of the United States before announcing action by its directors. But Big Steel, as it is sometimes called, felt a responsibility.

Blough wished it to be known, he told Kennedy, that a $6-a-ton price increase was then being announced in Pittsburgh and that it would take effect at midnight. He seemed shocked and puzzled at Kennedy's anger.

There appears to be an element of surprise in the timing of these steel industry announcements. And Kennedy was one of those who was surprised. In fact he felt betrayed and so leveled all the power of his administration at the industry. The increase was rescinded.

Among the surprising aspects of the present announcement, at least so far as the public is concerned, is that it came almost simultaneously with a report of surging profits and sales.

Last month's business conditions do not, of course, mean that next month's will be the same. Bethlehem felt it must prepare for tougher times by boosting its income. But a lot of people may forget that.

Among other interesting considerations are these:

—The same executives who have claimed all year that low priced foreign steel was undercutting the domestic market are the same ones now who want to raise prices. Wouldn't price increases aggravate foreign competition?

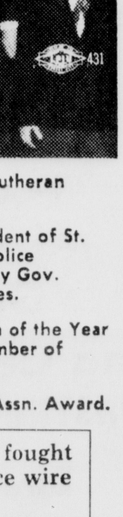

—The announced price increase is planned to coincide with what almost every steelman in America believes is an expected sharp decline in sales. If sales drop, aren't prices expected to drop also?

—The nature of the Bethlehem increase was "across-the-board," meaning that every steel item was included, although based on past experience such an increase was bound to bring a reaction from Washington.

Bethlehem seemingly was aware of this, for at the very time its broad increase on structural shapes was being knocked back by the administration in 1966, U.S. Steel was permitted to raise prices "selectively."

These selective increases, one following the other, have in some periods almost accomplished the same results as the more dramatic across-the-board type. In 1967, for example, more than 50 per cent of steel products were selectively raised in price.

Has the Experience

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — When Richard M. Nixon first became prominent in national Republican politics, Ronald Reagan was a Democrat and Nelson A. Rockefeller was working for one.

That was nearly 20 years ago, as Nixon, a congressman at 33, quickly became senator and then vice president while Reagan headed the Screen Actors Guild and Rockefeller held a variety of posts in both Democratic and Republican administrations.

Now, as the three contend for the GOP presidential nomination at the Republican National Convention opening Monday, Reagan and Rockefeller—the governors of California and New York—are the ones in major elective office.

But Nixon, the Californian turned New York lawyer after two successive defeats, has been the front runner throughout the GOP preconvention campaign.

All three received big boosts in 1966. Reagan and Rockefeller won smashing victories in hotly fought contests. Nixon, as the chief GOP campaigner, cheerleader and money raiser, shared in the victory that saw the Republicans regain much of what they had lost in 1964.

Nixon, who at 55 is the youngest but also the most experienced politically of the three, comes into the convention in a far different position than eight years ago when he was vice president and the virtually unopposed choice to succeed retiring President Dwight D. Eisenhower. But he lost the election narrowly to John F. Kennedy.

This year, rather than being called on to defend an incumbent administration, Nixon has been on the attack against the Johnson administration.

He has largely ignored his GOP opposition, first Michigan Gov. George Romney and now Rockefeller, and has concentrated on building his organization and campaign for the fall fight against the Democrats.

As in 1960, his wife Pat has been helping his campaign. His daughters are now old enough to campaign, too, especially his younger daughter Julie and her fiance David Eisenhower, grandson of the former president.

To many, Nixon has seemed more relaxed, more confident and more able to laugh at events—and himself—and he has not lost his cool in the leisurely paced campaign tailored to his front-running status.

Rockefeller, on the other hand, has over the past three months waged the most vigorous campaign of the three GOP contenders. He has not hesitated to attack Nixon by name, saying that the vice president would be unable to win the election and that only he (Rockefeller) could return the Republicans to national power.

A youthful-appearing and vigorous 60, Rockefeller has appealed especially to young people who have played such a conspicuous role in the Democratic campaigns of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

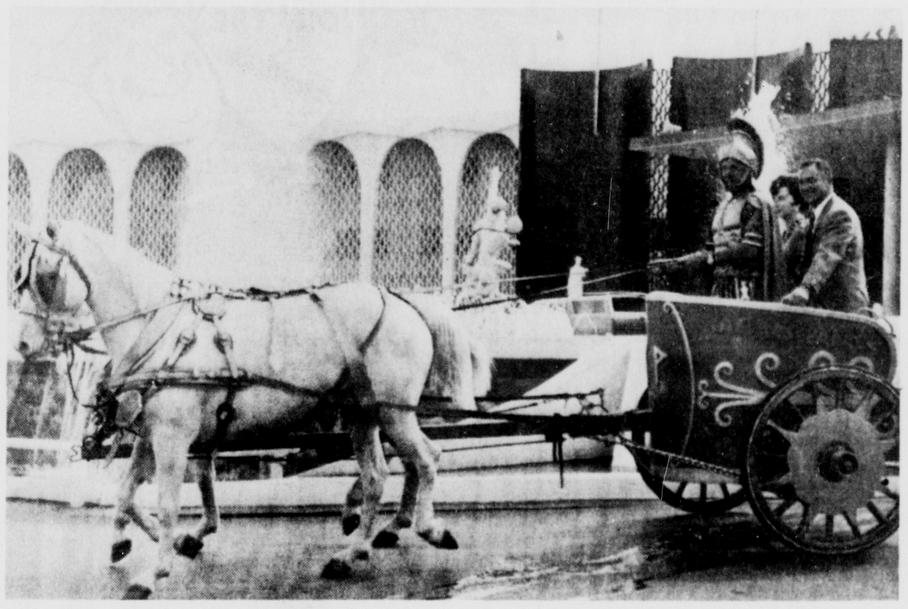

His youthful image is enhanced by the presence of his second wife, Happy, nearly 20 years his junior.

Despite public service under Democratic Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman and Republican Eisenhower in the 1940s and 1950s, Rockefeller never sought public office until he won the governorship in 1958.

After backing off from challenging Nixon in 1960, he sought the presidency in 1964 despite his politically damaging divorce and remarriage.

But he lost the key California primary to Barry Goldwater and wound up being booed at the national convention in San Francisco after he had backed William W. Scranton's last-month drive against the Arizona senator.

Even after his 1966 re-election revived his political fortunes, Rockefeller stayed out of the presidential picture until Romney dropped out of the running.

Capture a 60-Pound 'Kitten' in City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sheriff's officers captured a 60-pound cougar kitten in south Salt Lake City Thursday night after a day-long hunt with bloodhounds.

Officers subdued the cougar with a tranquilizer gun near a spot where it had killed a goat early Thursday.

It was not known whether the animal was a pet. "I keep waiting for somebody to call in and say 'I've lost my cougar'," the dispatcher said.

Battle Against Joblessness Gets Off to a Slow Beginning

By JEAN HELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's program to put 500,000 hard-core unemployed to work is off to a slow start, say project officials, partly because employers demand too many skills and the unemployed want too much money.

The program, operated by the National Alliance of Businessmen, has received thousands of pledges of jobs from industry, but it is having trouble filling the openings.

NAB administrators in 10 major cities covered in an Associated Press survey agreed that job pledges far exceed placements, although officials in only four of the 10 could provide exact figures.

In those four—Newark, Cleveland, Chicago and Pittsburgh—pledges totaled 21,477 and jobs filled added up to 766.

Nonetheless, officials expressed confidence that the joint government-industry venture eventually will succeed. Jack McGowen, NAB director in San Francisco, put it this way: "It is a little too early to judge the long-range effect, but we are encouraged by what we consider a newly aroused section of public conscience. We are optimistic."

Program administrators in the 10 cities surveyed said problems encountered most frequently were:

—Jobs offered sometimes require skills the hard-core unemployed do not possess.

—Jobs pledged often do not pay well enough to encourage the unemployed to abandon their welfare checks.

—Some jobs evaporate before NAB can produce applicants for interviews.

—Placement procedures, the process of matching an applicant with a job, have been slowed by administrative red tape and manpower shortages.

—Job pledges sometimes go unfilled because transportation problems are prohibitive.

When the National Alliance of Businessmen was launched last January under the leadership of Henry Ford II, chairman of the Ford Motor Co., its goal was to put 100,000 hard-core unemployed to work by next summer and 500,000 to work by the summer of 1971.

In June, Johnson called on the NAB to find another 200,000 jobs for needy youth this summer and congratulated Ford on NAB's "remarkable performance" in securing 133,000 pledges of permanent jobs from companies throughout the country.

Job pledges for both the permanent and summer job programs have come in fast, NAB officials say—in some cases much faster than they expected.

But pledges are one thing; placements another.

Newark and other cities reported that some of the unemployed have rejected jobs. NAB officials and businessmen reported that 26 persons hired did not report for work, 19 refused job offers and 172 did not report for interviews.

Almost twice as many spots were not filled because of rejections by employers. In 166 instances, businessmen refused to hire applicants; in 52 cases, employers filled jobs with other than NAB applicants, and in 134 cases, employers cancelled jobs before NAB applicants got there.

NAB officials say they are being frustrated, too—by red tape and misunderstandings.

Robert Bennett, an NAB member in Buffalo, N.Y., says:

"Another problem is that an employer will pledge, say, 10 jobs in his plant but when the employment service contacts the employer they find the skills required for the openings are more than the hard-core unemployed have. The problem here is in educating employers as to just what the hard-core unemployed are."

Baltimore's NAB director, Robert S. Ginsburg, blamed the welfare system.

"The welfare and unemployment insurance is running a bloody battle with us," he said. "There's no incentive to work."

Pollsters Point Out A Leader

NEW YORK (AP) — Top pollsters George H. Gallup Jr. and Louis Harris say that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller "has now moved to an open lead" over Democratic presidential candidates Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy.

They also said in a joint statement Thursday that Richard M. Nixon would run an "extremely close" race in a contest involving Humphrey and third party candidate George C. Wallace, "with Wallace perhaps holding the balance."

Gallup and Harris disclosed these conclusions after their most recently published polls, taken in July, were in apparent contradiction and created considerable political repercussions as Republicans gathered in Miami Beach, Fla. for their national convention.

Gallup and Harris said two key factors accounted for the apparent disparity in the polls: the time at which the polls were taken and the margin of error built into the sampling process. "Public opinion changes over time, and each was an accurate reflection at the time it was taken," they said.

The Gallup Poll, published Monday and based on interviews between July 19 and 21, showed Nixon defeating both Humphrey and McCarthy while Rockefeller was only able to tie them. The Nixon camp cheered this survey.

Then the Harris Poll, based on interviews taken July 26-29, became available Wednesday night and showed Rockefeller could prevail over either of the Democratic hopefuls while Nixon coult not. Rockefeller supporters cheered.

The Gallup-Harris statement further buoyed the Rockefeller camp, for the New York Republican has based his campaign to upset Nixon for the GOP nomination on convincing delegates that he is more popular with the voters than Nixon.

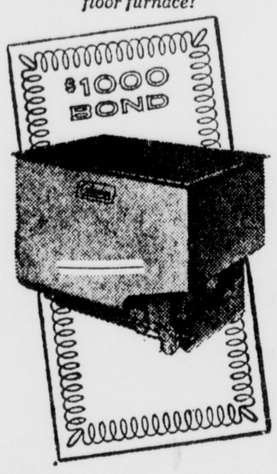

In Miami Beach, Leonard Hall, Rockefeller's convention floor manager, said the joint statement provided "further confirmation of the momentum that has been building up in recent weeks all over the country for Mr. Rockefeller."

In the same city, Herbert G. Klein, Nixon's chief spokesman, charged that "professional togetherness" keeps pollsters from criticizing each other. He said Rockefeller chose polls as the battleground and "struck out."

Ann Landers

Teen Fans Steady Though Divided

Dear Ann Landers: What is a mother to do when her husband teaches the children crazy eating habits? I know what made Alphonse nutty — his mother. She stood over the stove 10 hours a day cooking separate meals for every cracked member of the family.

His sister was a vegetarian and his two brothers wouldn't touch fresh fruits or vegetables or fish or chicken. An unmarried aunt who made her home with them lived on carrot juice, wheat germ, yogurt and hard-boiled eggs. His father wasn't crazy, just sick, but he had to eat special foods because of ulcers and diabetes.

When I married Alphonse I knew he would not eat or drink anything white — potatoes, milk, rice, white bread, cottage cheese, whipped cream. The list is a long one. Now our oldest son (age 6) tells me he won't eat anything Daddy won't eat. Our youngest son is only three but he is already pushing away certain foods.

If you have any suggestions please pass them on. I am — COOK FOR A KOOK

Dear Cook: You can't change Alphonse's eating habits at this late date but you can refuse to knuckle under to the kids and I hope you do, for their sake as well as yours.

Make it clear that they will eat what is set before them and there will be no substitutes. If they push things away, say nothing. Remove the food from the table without comment. If they are hungry in an hour, tell them, "Sorry, mealtime is over." After a while they will eat what is served and everyone will be happier.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been married 17 years. He is a lovely man and our marriage is an extremely good one. The tragedy of our lives is that we were never blessed with children. I went to specialists in three cities and was told by all it was extremely unlikely that I would ever have a family.

I am writing to ask what to do about my husband's widowed sister. Emily comes to our home every Sunday for dinner and never leaves without making some cruel remark about not having a family. (She never says anything in my husband's presence.) Yesterday Emily looked around at our newly furnished sun porch and sighed, "A home is not a home without children. What a pity you failed George." She quickly added, "I know it's not your fault, dear, but it's a pity nevertheless."

This morning I received in the mail an article from a cheap magazine which said, "A man cannot truly love a woman until she bears his child." There was no evidence of who sent the article but I know very well it was Emily. Incidentally, she was married 25 years and had five children. Her husband drank himself to death and three of her children do not speak to her or to each other.

Shall I continue to burn silently or should I say something to George? — VA OF VA.

Dear Va: The next time your sister-in-law makes one of her darling remarks ask her to please repeat it in George's presence because you think perhaps he might wish to comment. If she is reluctant, keep insisting until she does. If George is the good man you say he is, he'll give his sister a reply that will button her lip for all time.

Taxicabs May Stop In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — The Democratic National Convention, once confronted by a lack of communications, now faces the possibility of a dearth of taxicabs.

The threat to transportation springs from a contract dispute between the Yellow and Checker Cab companies and Local 777 of the Democratic Union Organizing Committee, an affiliate of the Seafarers International Union.

Yellow has 2,166 and Checker 1,500 of the 4,600 licensed cabs in the city. The 934 others are independents.

A management spokesman said Thursday it had heard rumors of a strike Aug. 6 against the Yellow and Checker firms.

The union contract with the union expired June 30. The drivers have worked without one since then.

"A strike would offer minimal inconvenience to convention delegates," said Jerry Feldman, president of the Checker Cab Co. He said "hundreds of cars" could be loaned by automobile companies and buses could be rented.

"We have a number of automobiles to pick up delegates and honored guests," said Martin Hauan, director of public affairs for the Democatic party.

The convention is scheduled to open Aug. 26 in the International Amphitheatre, five miles from the downtown business district.

A strike of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers against the Illinois Bell Telephone Co.—now in its 87th day—threatened to move the convention out of Chicago.

But an agreement permitted members of the striking union to install telephone, television and teletype equipment in the amphitheatre on a voluntary basis beginning July 25.

Local 777, which has 5,000 members working as cab drivers and mechanics for the Yellow and Checker companies, has asked for pay increases which the companies call outrageous.

Antiquing Made Easy with Provincial Color Glaze

Strike a glow for glamour! You can change that attic discard into the pride of your life. Martin Senour's Provincial Color Glaze is easy—and fun—to apply.

The more scars and scratches, the better. They'll add character—and look like the "distressing" that decorators prize.

Leave the original paint or varnish as is. Just wash clean, then "paint-glaze-and wipe," according to the instructions. (Glamorizes unfinished furniture, too.)

Who says you're not creative? Swing out with warm, bright colors . . . delicate, feminine tints . . . or rich wood tones. The inexpensive kit is foolproof. Contains all you need, from brush to handbook.

Tight Security For GOP Convention

By FRANK MURRAY
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Security plans hatched to preserve dignity on the floor of the Republican National Convention have escalated into top-secret strategies to insure the safety of presidential candidates and pen up demonstrators.

Even the skies above the convention city are guarded in a defense plan that deeply involves the U.S. Secret Service.

Convention Hall is surrounded by a fence with a built-in "corral" for demonstrators. Police are armed heavily enough to repel a minor invasion should that become necessary after the parley begins Monday.

Security restrictions on the floor of the hall forced a sharp cutback in admission of persons who are neither delegates nor alternates, limited bands for candidate parades to 50 musicians and prescribed 15,000 as the number of balloons permitted to rain down during a nomination hooray.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower began the planning when he wrote an article criticizing confusion on the floor at the 1964 convention. Recent assassinations, especially the killing of Democratic presidential aspirant Robert F. Kennedy, have set a serious tone for the work.

Architect for the security is John T. Sherwood, a former Secret Service agent from the presidential detail and now a private detective in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The 57-year-old Sherwood, a Republican who advertises his politics with elephants on his socks, is chief sergeant-at-arms for the convention. That job used to be a party plum handed to a faithful worker.

"This is the first national convention where someone of a professional police background was chosen as chief sergeant-at-arms," Sherwood said in an interview.

Sherwood said it was his insistence that overcame GOP committee objections to the fence around convention hall. It was Sherwood who insisted on counterfeit-resistant convention tickets changed daily with code symbols printed on them invisibly with ink that fluoresces under "black light."

Invisible security also has been the approach by Police Chief Rocky Pomerance. He says the image of his city and of the Republican National Committee needs the greatest protection with the least possible exposure.

Pomerance keeps secret not only the number of law officers assigned to convention work but refuses to discuss the expectation of demonstrations.

"I'm not going to fall into the trap of other police chiefs and get publicity for some militants," Pomerance said. "Let them publicize it."

No permits are required for picket lines or parades here but the police department has use of many intelligence agencies to learn what is coming.

Only hand-carried placards and sandwich signs are allowed —sticks are forbidden. Miami Beach also has ordinances that will bar the use of swastikas or hammer and sickle emblems.

Protests announced in advance include only one directed at the Republicans-a struggle by Florida Negroes to win seats on the state's all-white convention delegation.

Cubans seeking support for anti-Castro activities plan a widow's walk at Convention Hall by what they say are 1,000 Cuban women whose husbands have been killed by Communists in Cuba, Vietnam and Korea.

Cuban organizers who said they tried to arrange a turnout of 30,000 or more at Convention Hall to win support for anti-Castro activities in this hemisphere instead plan to meet at Miami Stadium, a baseball park four miles from Convention Hall that seats about 10,000.

An uncoordinated group of youngsters who picket for peace against politicians of most every stripe planned demonstrations as did the Poor People's Campaign led by the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy.

Spokesmen for each group insisted they do not plan to disrupt the convention, block access, invade the floor or cause civil disobedience.

Even if they did, police were ready. Behind that flower-covered fence are men equipped with weapons purchased recently for the convention: 40 shotguns, 20 combat flak jackets, three 30-06 Remington rifles with telescope sights and 50 smoke grenades.

A small army of federal agents is in Miami Beach. More than 200 live aboard the U.S. Navy attack transport Fremont at a freighter pier about one mile from Convention Hall. Six buses shuttle the men to their duty stations.

For a week those agents—including Secret Service, FBI, Customs, Internal Revenue and military intelligence—have combed hotels and mapped traffic routes for candidate and VIP security.

Forty-five Florida beverage agents were specially assigned to patrol bars and hotels to police against what State Beverage Director Don Meiklejohn termed an influx of prostitutes.

The four men designated as candidates—Nixon, Nelson A. Rockefeller, Ronald Reagan and Harold E. Stassen—have had 21-man details of Secret Service agents assigned 24 hours a day. Congress approved the security guard for candidates shortly after Robert Kennedy died.

It was the Secret Service which arranged for the Federal Aviation Administration to ban all flights within one mile of Convention Hall without prior approval and at altitudes under 1,000 feet anywhere within one mile of the Miami Beach land area or the main airport-to-Miami Beach expressway.

A commercial usher service, Andy Frain Service of Chicago, was hired to supply 350 men as ticket collectors and door guards—also jobs formerly assigned as prestige jobs by the party.

As the 16,900 people crowd into the hall for two sessions a day uniformed ushers will use a ticket-numbering and turnstile counting system as early warning of counterfeit ticket schemes. Each numbered block of tickets is admitted at one gate and the number of those tickets is known. Sherwood explained that a gatekeeper whose turnstile tallies too many entrants will be warned to check the black light symbols on tickets.

All packages will be searched at the doors—briefcases, lunch bags and such.

Outside, the force of 200 Miami Beach police, working 12-hour days with vacations, leaves and days off cancelled, is boosted by several hundred uniformed police from other departments.

Miami is contributing the entire 40-man motorcycle force while Dade County sends along its 30-man motorcycle troop in addition to other officers. Police stationed outside Convention Hall can shade themselves in special thatched-roof chickees or huts built by Seminole indians.

Sherwood, the man responsible for security planning, sat in his command post with two-way radio squawking and pondered the blueprint. He was like the sheriff who refused to brag of an escape-proof jail.

"Of course, we can't expect to be perfect," Sherwood said. "Somebody always beats the system, as the saying goes, but perhaps we'll make it tougher.

"I've been to a lot of conventions with the hoopla and wild pandemonium and gallery packing. This one could be very dull, terribly dull."

Record Level Of Benefits For County

A record $415,714 was paid out in Social Security cash benefits to 5,484 residents of Pettis County for February, according to C. Kent Charles, Social Security district manager, for an increase of $73,565 over the amount paid out for December, 1966.

"February, 1968, was the first month in which increased benefit rates provided by the 1967 amendments to the Social Security Act were payable," Charles noted.

Nationally, the amount of monthly benefits exceeds $2 billion, an increase of more than $360 million above the December, 1966, figure. More than 24 million men, women, and children, or nearly one out of every eight Americans, are now receiving some type of monthly benefit.

Siam changed its name to Thailand in 1948.

Raft Ordeal By Fisherman Is Described

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — The Coast Guard says the average survival time for a soaking wet man aboard a liferaft in the Pacific Ocean is four hours. Dave Thomas, 25, lasted 40 hours.

The Astoria fisherman, whose 66-foot dragboat Redoma sank Tuesday night, described the experience Friday after sleeping for 16 hours at his home.

"I was in the wheelhouse when I hit something big," he said. "I went topside and launched the liferaft because the boat was taking water fast.

"I went back to the wheelhouse and called for help. They tell me a woman ham operator relayed my distress call. By that time there was a foot of water and my ship-to-shore radio went out," he said.

"Then I heard a whoosh and saw she was going down by the stern. I dove over the side and climbed on the raft as the Redoma went down."

Thomas said the cork raft was low in the water and he was waist deep in it the entire time. He said he heard a Coast Guard airplane criss-crossing overhead on the first foggy day adrift.

"The second morning a fishboat passed within 100 yards, but I couldn't make him hear me," he said.

"I had terrible cramps and shivers."

The Coast Guard plane from Port Angeles, Wash. spotted the raft Thursday afternoon when the fog cleared for a period.

"Let's rekindle the true spirit of Americanism."

BLOWIN' IN THE WIND, Don Cherry's cheeks seemed to be exploding as he played for the jazz festival at Pori, Finland. Cherry and the New York Total Music Company were among the well-known musicians who took part in the two-day event which gathered thousands of jazz enthusiasts.

This Week in Business

NEW YORK (AP) — Steel was the big word in business the past week with a billion-dollar labor contract agreement, an immediate price increase and a denunciation by President Johnson.

The 11 major steel companies and the United Steelworkers of America wrapped up the contract on Tuesday, a little more than 24 hours before a strike deadline.

The 450,000 steelworkers will get increases in wages and fringe benefits amounting to 90 cents to $1 an hour—about 6.5 per cent a year—over three years.

The union estimated it will mean $1 billion to the workers.

On Wednesday, U.S. Steel Corp., the biggest producer, announced a price increase for can-making steel. Quickly, second-ranked Bethlehem Steel Corp. followed with a 5 per cent general increase.

On Friday, U.S. Steel announced additional $7-a-ton price hikes for structural shapes, H piles and plates.

President Johnson deplored the Bethlehem action as "unreasonable" and said it "just shouldn't be permitted to stand."

Republic Steel, Pittsburgh Steel, Inland Steel and Phoenix Steel went along with price boosts of varying sweep.

Johnson, in his news conference remarks, said, "Inflation in steel is inflation for the nation."

Indications were that higher steel prices—based on experience after previous rises—would be passed on to consumers at the retail level if the increase becomes general.

On the inflation front, the Labor Department reported the cost of living rose in June at an annual rate of 6 per cent, well above recent advances of 4 per cent.

The consumer price index advanced last month 0.5 per cent to a record 120.9 per cent of the 1957-59 average. That means it costs $12.09 to buy items that cost $10 in 1957-59.

The Commerce Department said the United States suffered another foreign trade deficit in June. The gap of $87.2 million was considerably deeper than the $32.2 million deficit in May and in sharp contrast to the more normal $350 million surplus in June 1967. It was the third deficit in four months.

Other business statistics that came out this week showed:

Domestic machine tool orders rose in June to $127.3 million from $115.8 million in May but were down from $139.3 million in June 1967.

Orders for manufactured products in June totaled $49.4 billion, virtually unchanged from May but up from $47.6 billion in June 1967.

Contracts for new construction totaled about $5.6 billion in June, less than 1 per cent higher than a year earlier.

With many automobile plants closed for changeover to 1969 models, production the past week fell to an estimated 39,500 passenger cars from 102,562 last week but was 75 per cent ahead of the 22,622 assembled a year earlier.

During June, output totaled 604,221 cars, compared with 390,344 in June 1967.

Steel production last week declined 2.3 per cent to 2,561,000 tons from 2,621,000 tons the previous week. It was the fifth consecutive weekly decline.

When a ship or military post surrenders to an enemy, it hauls down, or strikes, the national flag.

4-H Show and Sale Set At Fairground Tuesday

The third annual 4-H Livestock Show and Sale will be held at the State Fairgrounds Tuesday and Tuesday night. The show will begin at 9:30 a.m. Judging will continue throughout the day with the awards presentation about 4 p.m.

The show and sale is co-sponsored by the Sedalia Chamber of Commerce and the 4-H youth of Pettis County. Awards will be presented by various civic clubs and area businessmen.

The sale will be held at the Sheep Pavalion, beginning at 7 p.m. This is considered the highlight of the activities, as spirited bidding for the top 4-H animals has attracted crowds of visitors and prospective bidders for the past two years. The grand champions have brought premium prices, and all others have averaged well above market prices.

The sale has been considered a big success, supported by businessmen from Sedalia, Smithton, LaMonte, Green Ridge and other area towns. The promoters feel this sale promotes an outstanding rural-urban relationship throughout the county.

Entries in the sale are determined by the results of the show. Club members with baby beef and market hog projects are permitted to enter one animal. Steers must have placed in the choice grade or better, and hogs must have been judged blue ribbon.

The sale has been promoted extensively by the Agricultural Committee of the chamber. This group is headed by Bill Hiatt, with Louis Hughes, Cliff Barr, Dan Robinson and Bill Burkholder members.

Two new features have been added to the sale this year. Safeway will present the owner of the grand champion steer a $75 award, and the owner of the reserve champion a $25 award.

The Pettis County Farm Bureau will sponsor a greased pig race immediately following the sale. Whoever catches the four pigs will be the new owners.

Rockefeller and Nixon To Take Center Stage

By JACK BELL
AP Politicsl Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The battle for the Republican presidential nomination is about to shift from arguments over polls and estimates of delegate strength to the personal impact of the two top contenders.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon are ready to present their individual credentials to the politicians and the impact they make could have more to do with the result than everything controversial that has gone before.

Is Nixon who lost by an eyelash in 1960 to John F. Kennedy, sufficiently rehabilitated politically to be trusted with this year's nomination?

Or should the party pick Rockefeller, a sometime renegade, as its standardbearer in a topsy turvy year?

There is almost no serious thought among outlanders in this sweltering convention city that Gov. Ronald Reagan of California could wind up with the nomination.

While the nation awaited the two major candidates' facedown with something less than the excitement attendant to pro football, a great deal of not very effectual politicking was going on behind the scenes here.

Nixon supporters were putting on the pressure to get southern delegates to hold the line against any early ballot break toward Reagan.

In addition the Nixon people were trying to encourage a break away from favorite sons who were displaying a fresh determination to take a good look at the situation before commiting themselves.

Among these Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio remained an inscrutable holdout. Nobody could forecast where Gov. George Romney might try to lead his Michigan delegation or where. Gov. Spiro T. Agnew would take Maryland.

Backers of Reagan, who says he isn't yet a candidate, put out a brochure that rivaled the well-financed efforts in behalf of Rockefeller. If Rockerfeller led the field in preconvention spending for the elusive nomination, Reagan's people were not far behind.

The swarming pro-Rockefeller troops were adding up all of the bits and pieces they could turn up to argue that Nixon will not become the nominee Wednesday night. They pointed to breaks here and there in the Nixon armament.

A backlog of resentment against Rockefeller for not having campaigned for Barry Goldwater in 1964 was beginning to show itself. No delegate talked about it in those terms, but the resentment residue was there.

What was incumbent on Rockefeller, scheduled to make the scene tonight, was a personal salesmanship to individual delegates.

Nixon would appear later, accompanied by his wife, daughters and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's grandson, to stand for endless, sweating hours to shake hands with the faithful.

George Wallace's American Independent Party prepared to hold its first state convention today in California amid confusion caused by rival factions staging sessions at separate sites.

One man claiming to be state chairman has scheduled his own convention in a downtown Sacramento hotel. Another group recognized by Wallace is meeting at a motel on the outskirts of the state capital.

"That's a sign of a healthy party, to have a little dissension," said Wallace as he arrived to address the motel meeting and be proclaimed as its choice for president.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey promised to fire Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey after a disputed report that the longtime draft boss had endorsed Wallace.

Both Humphrey and rival candidate Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., called for more efforts to aid the starving populace of Biafra, the breakaway region involved in Nigeria's civil war. McCarthy said it is "intolerable that our own government has contented itself with what must be seen as vain and futile gestures while human life is at stake."

Legal Ploy Of Sirhan Sirhan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan's attorney may rely on a little used and controversial defense tactic to try to reduce the penalty his client would face if convicted of killing Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

The 24-year-old Sirhan pleaded innocent to the murder charge Friday but attorney Russell E. Parsons reserved the right to make new motions within 35 days. Under California law, one option available is the defense of "diminished capacity," or partial insanity.

If employing this tactic, the defense would try to show through psychiatric evidence that because of a mental disease or defect the defendant could not form the specific intent, malice and premeditation required for conviction of first-degree murder.

Until 1949 California courts had ruled against the defense in the use of such a device, holding that insanity is either a full defense requiring a plea of innocent by reason of insanity, or no defense at all. Decisions since 1949 have made the defense feasible. It would not result in acquittal if successful, but would reduce the charge to second-degree murder or manslaughter.

At Sirhan's 22½-minute court appearance Friday, the Jordanian immigrant's trial was set for Nov. 1. After Sirhan entered his plea Parsons said he did not know if his client is sane. He said he still is studying reports by two defense psychiatrists and is waiting for his client to have his brain X-rayed.

The court was convened in a special facility on the 13th floor of the hall of justice, about 50 feet from Sirhan's isolated cell. Sirhan's mother and three of his four brothers were in the makeshift courtroom.

When asked how he wished to plead, he replied in a loud, clear voice: "Not guilty."

He also pleaded innocent to five counts of assault with a deadly weapon and with intent to commit murder. Five other persons were wounded in the fusilade of shots that killed Sen. Kennedy last June 5 at the Ambassador Hotel.

Family's Political Symbol is Missing

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Dr. Robert McComas says that if his wife would stick to her political party's symbol the family probably wouldn't have lost its pet.

The family's donkey, "Chico," disappeared Tuesday. McComas noted the donkey is a Democratic party symbol.

The doctor's wife, Elizabeth McComas, is one of the New Mexico delegates to the Republican National Convention where there will be plenty of elephant symbols.

World's Week in Review

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

That quadrennial "madness"—the presidential nominating conventions—was upon the nation again. "The Man Who" speeches were polished and ready for delivery, and the men who would be president waited in the wings—and hotel suites—listening for a call that might never come.

Down in Miami Beach it was the Republicans who were gathering to select their standard bearer for the November balloting to decide who will succeed Lyndon Baines Johnson in the White House. The hoopla will begin Aug. 5.

There was planty of hoopla during the week, however—a week dominated by political polls.

George Gallup and Louis Harris, the two top pollsters, announced in a joint statement that Gov. Nelson Rockefeller has moved to a clear lead over Vice President Hubert Humphrey or Sen. Eugene McCarthy, the Democratic party contenders, in the presidential race. It was a big assist for Rockefeller.

Rockefeller's convention manager, Leonard Hall, said the New York governor has sealed off a quick nomination for Richard Nixon with an informal agreement of major favorite sons to stand fast on the first two ballots. But Nixon's press director, Herb Klein, countered that Nixon can win on an early ballot without the favorite sons if they decide to hold out. Meanwhile, aides of California Gov. Ronald Reagan unveiled an active campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

In the long-awaited pronouncement on birth control, Pope Paul VI rejected the Pill and all other artificial contraceptive devices for the world's half-billion Roman Catholics. The Pope's conservative decision, ignoring the recommendations of a majority of his 75-member birth control commission, was a controversial one.

Round one is over in the confrontation between Czechoslovakia's reform Communists and Soviet leaders. Who won in that showdown border meeting in the Slovakian town of Cierna? Results seem to be inconclusive, with the Russians struggling to stave off the appearance of defeat.

Round two brings Moscow's four faithful allies—Poland, Bulgaria, East Germany and Hungary—to the new meeting in Bratislava, Slovakia.

The meetings concern Soviet displeasure with what has been called the "democratization," or liberalization of the Czech Communist party leadership, led by Alexander Dubcek. Most of the new freedom has been evident in the press, radio and television, where censorship has been abolished.

For the third time since 1962, the White House and the steel industry are toe-to-toe in a price dispute. This one began after the United Steelworkers Union won a new billion-dollar labor contract—richest in its history—last Tuesday night. The new contract will give the nation's 450,000 steelworkers wage and benefit hikes of 90 cents to a dollar an hour, with the over-all package figured to be a 6.5 per cent increase in each year of the three-year contract.

Less than 24 hours later, U.S. Steel Corp., the country's biggest steelmaker, posted increases for many of its tin mill products. Bethlehem Steel, No. 2 in the industry, followed with an increase of almost 5 per cent across the board—the first of its kind since President John F. Kennedy forced a rollback in 1962.

Then came the order from Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford who shifted Pentagon spending for steel to companies which hold the price line. Clifford said the price hikes could have "a serious impact" on defense expenditures. The Pentagon took similar actions in April 1962 and January 1966 in efforts to force rollbacks of steel price increases.

The emphasis in Vietnam peace maneuvers was in trying to get Hanoi to show some sign of reciprocal military de-escalation. On Tuesday, Secretary of State Dean Rusk said the United States cannot further curtail bombing of North Vietnam until that country makes a "realistic response" to U.S. moves for peace. The next day, President Johnson said he was discouraged over the infiltration and troop buildup by North Vietnam in the South and lack of response so far to the U.S. bombing restraint. He said if a North Vietnam offensive is launched in the South, it is possible the United States will "have to consider additional military measures."

Giraffe Crosses State for Mating

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kansas City and St. Louis zoo officials arranged a midnight rendezvous Friday between a pair of giraffes.

A 16-foot male giraffe was hauled from the Kansas City zoo at the western edge of the state to his new home and mate in the St. Louis zoo.

William Hoff, executive director of the St. Louis zoo said the Kansas City swain was acquired as a mate for a masai giraffe in St. Louis.

The truck trip was sticky going across the state. The giraffe, atop a special truck, crests at 20 feet and every time they reached a bridge they stopped and the giraffe's head was pulled down with a rope.

Crossroads Comment . . . .

"My son, you should cultivate acquaintance with yourself," said the father.

The underlying meaning of this advice of father to son meant that the boy knew himself better than anyone else and should seek solitude occasionally to mentally converse with himself about his own shortcomings.

This advice is set down for the benefit of some youngster who inclines to the belief there should be no restraint on his or her behavior; that parents are all wet about attempting to guide juvenile behavior; that youth may merrily trip along the way to perdition — and whose business is it anyway?

Cultivate acquaintanceship with yourself, youngster. Spend an hour with yourself alone in your room some evening. Just do some honest, straight-from-the-shoulder talking to yourself, your conscience. Don't hedge. Don't self-pity yourself. Come clean.

Sure you've been mean and contemptible with your playmates, with your parents. You've done a little lying, a little cheating, and you think you are getting away with it. Well, you aren't. Nobody is calling you a liar or a cheat, but they know you for what you are. The only person you are kidding is yourself. So what's the gain of being obstinate?

You can build yourself a character, or continue to destroy it. Yours is the choice. Go off in a corner and think it over. This is a good physic to clean out the mental poison in your system.

Some adults can stand a dose of this kind of personal solitude and castigation by conscience, too.

Mountains of Life

When the sun starts to set on life 'tis then
We look back and see the years again,
Some so triumphant for along the road
They have been able to carry the load
That God has given and yet each mile
They have had faith and the courage to smile,
And they turn to the sunset and see its gold
For their honor, their virtue has never been sold,
The path that they chose has sometimes been rough
Where the weaker would say: "I've had enough."
Only self-centered will place the blame
On somebody else in the losing game;
Some in their first steps go astray
But life is before them, they find the way;
Those in maturity stand at the edge
The ledge of the mountain they cannot climb
Never dreaming there'll come a time
Up mountains they seek they'll fearfully creep
And there still will be nights they cannot sleep
Because treasures they foolishly let slip
Fall into the past as they take a new grip
And try to change mountains but only they'll find
God has made mountains all of one kind
And only the strong, with determined will,
Seem to climb easily every hill
For they have loyalty, they have belief,
They work out problems, overcome grief,
They face the tempest, the violent gale
Unafraid and certain they will not fail,
But the weak will falter and look around
To see, can a better mountain be found,
Their climb is monotonous they claim
But all of their mountains will be the same
And when at the top, the sunset in sight,
Their sunset will never be as bright
For there will be clouds to hide from view
The brilliant beauty of its golden hue,
They look back down through misty tears
At the fallen rocks, at the wasted years,
While he who has trudged on the mountain way
Feels at peace with himself at the closing day
For his hand has been firm and his foot has been sure
What came in his life he had strength to endure
And he looks with content toward the setting sun
That will bring him the blessing of work well done.

Miami Convention Will Be Grim

By DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON

MIAMI BEACH — Richard Nixon is so confident of emerging the winner from this, the biggest political contest, that he's told aides he won't come to Miami until Tuesday. His aides, with equal confidence, or perhaps braggadocio, are predicting that Nixon will win by the time the roll call of states reaches Tennessee.

Meanwhile, Nixon is on the telephone personally directing every move made by his henchmen. They don't book an extra suite of rooms at the Hilton Plaza Hotel, where Nixon's headquarters are, without calling the boss in New York. They are cool, calculating, confident, and so is their boss in his law offices high above downtown Manhattan.

You would never guess from their conversation that the biggest handicap Nixon has had to overcome is the sickening fear among rank-and-file Republicans that "Nixon can't win." It results from the memory of that disastrous 1962 defeat when he ran for governor of California, and that terrible display of temper at the press conference which followed in which he castigated California newspapers.

The whispered reminder that Nixon is a two-time loser and won the vice presidency only when he traveled piggyback on Eisenhower's broad shoulders is the most serious obstacle Nixon has to erase. His cohorts in Miami are doing a pretty good job of making people forget about it.

It's illustrated when you land at the airport. Gov. Rockefeller has pretty girls covered with "Rocky" buttons out to meet the delegates. But they don't know who the delegates are and look prettily at every arrival.

In contrast, Nixon has two of his men meet every plane. There are no girls to kiss new arrivals, no bands playing. But the two henchmen do have a list of delegates, pick the right men and announce "we have a car waiting for you."

Enroute to the hotel the delegates are romanced for Nixon.

—Secret Ammunition—

Both Rockefeller and Nixon cherish as their most guarded possessions a file of every delegate and such pertinent information as who their bankers are, how much money they owe, the size of mortgage on their home.

Rockefeller's statistics are kept in a black book with a lock on it. Nixon's are kept in carefully guarded files.

Nixon's operation gives the impression of professional smoothness. Rockefeller has stirred up the visitors in the living room, but Nixon has the delegates pledged in the back room. And it's in the back rooms the final decisions are going to be made.

Rockefeller's cohorts are trying to do another Wendell Willkie, recalling the so-called "barefoot boy of Wall Street" who took the 1940 Republican convention by storm.

However, what most people don't know is that the Willkie strategy was planned well in advance. The Rockefellers know it, however, for their economic empire helped to plan it. Weeks before the convention, the Chase Bank, controlled by the Rockefeller family, was giving the word to GOP delegates to go for Willkie.

In the current race, significantly, Rockefeller has not permitted the power of his family fortune to be used. He used it for Eisenhower against Taft in the 1952 convention. The big Eastern money of the Republican party made some remarkable converts for Ike at the last minute, as witness the conversion of the Pennsylvania delegation. They arrived in Chicago pledged to Taft. But after Gov. John Fine received a call from Ben Fairless of U.S. Steel, they switched to Ike.

However, Nelson has given orders that this is not to be done for him. The use of the Rockefeller family fortune could mean the difference in the voting next week, but the Chase Manhattan Bank and Standard Oil of N.J. are being kept carefully on the sidelines.

—Never Such Security—

You hear lots of rumors about tight security at Miami Beach. They are understatements. Never has a political convention been so tightly guarded, never have tickets and badges been so carefully given out. Tickets are coded and the numbers on the tickets are being changed every day. Fluorescent ink has been used to prevent counterfeiting.

What They Say

EUGENE WETZEL (Secretary-Treasurer, Benton County Taxpayers' Ass'n Inc.) — I have sent the following letter to Gov. Warren E. Hearnes:

"I noticed your invitation for the opinion of the taxpayers of Missouri which appeared in the Sedalia Democrat with regard to the Toll Road Law which the Missouri Supreme Court ruled was unconstitutional. I rather doubt whether you will appreciate our feelings in this matter, but if I could not give you an honest statement of the sentiment of the members of the Benton County Taxpayer's Association, and myself, I would not waste time writing.

"It is our feeling that any law that would take the taxpayer's revenue that is badly needed for the construction and maintenance of State Highways and Supplementary State Roads and divert it to build a Super-Toll Road which will never benefit the majority of people who are paying the bill, would not only be unconstitutional, but a breach of faith and trust between the people and the highest executive in the State House.

"We wish to commend the good judgment of the State Supreme Court in rendering a negative decision in this matter. It is our earnest desire that this decision may awaken every one of our Legislators to the fact that in the future they cannot take tax dollars from all of the people and use it for the profit and convenience of a few.

"If the major cities of Missouri feel that it is necessary for them to have Toll Roads as a direct connecting link to bolster their economy I would suggest that they vote bonds to build them instead of stripping funds from the entire State Road System."

Challenge for Youth

The restless teenager becomes more restless with nothing to do when school ends. Summer employment, even with the assistance of private industry and government, is not available for every young person. No matter how understanding the parents are, or how cooperative the young persons are, there are days of frustration and boredom.

One 17-year-old high school senior has had a good summer job for two years which paid him well. He hated it because it was operating a computer and it required "no brains." This year he is volunteering to tutor children in an underprivileged neighborhood. He will get little or no pay, but he says, "I will be helping some one, and learning something about how other people live." This boy's mother is a widow, and the money her son earned during his vacations was important, but she is agreeing with him this summer that the tutoring job may be more satisfying.

Tutoring is a job many smart high school and college students can do. They might even get paid for it. It should be done through the school library or neighborhood organization, but could be done independently if the tutor is knowledgeable and anxious to help the one who needs and wants to be tutored.

Cries for Change, Renewal Jar Council of Churches

By DAVID POLING

UPPSALA, Sweden (NEA) The World Council of Churches will never again be a quiet ecumenical gathering where elderly theologians have pleasant discussions waiting for afternoon tea. The delegates—preceded by the King of Sweden, the President of Zambia, and the Archbishop of Canterbury—had hardly been seated in the cathedral of this university city, when the voices of protest were heard. A student leader said that young people "could no longer honor the trappings of grandeur."

Christianity, for the Now Generation of young believers, has very little to do with ancient chants, flowing robes and concert choirs.

Instead of priests swinging incense, they want the church to be incensed with the horror of war, the reign of violence and the hovering cloud of poverty. Their image of Jesus Christ is one of servant, not king, at home in the huts of the poor, not the halls of princes.

Fortunately, the youth and the leadership of the World Council are often on the same wave length. They differ on the time schedule.

Films, slides, posters and color displays by Sister Corita, the American artist-nun, exploded all over Uppsala. The council staff "turned on" the youth and many of the delegates with its Cafe Chantant. It roared nightly with folk rock, protest songs, teach-ins and debates.

British Broadcasting Co. provided an evening of controversy and inspiration with its documentary film, "Christ and Disorder." It focused on the failures of the church in many parts of the world—its divisions, bewildering liturgy, reactionary policies and frequent blunders. Yet it dared to highlight the locations of genuine advance (Africa) and new experiments in rural assistance (India). Again, the film makers were asking the same question as the youth: Can the church practice what it has preached for 2,000 years?

The most highly charged evening of the 14-day assembly was the appearance of the internationally famous and controversial American folk singer, Pete Seeger.

He presented a program of folk songs centering on peace and racial harmony. Up in the galleries, the land of the miniskirts, beards and sweat shirts, young people roared their approval and sang along on almost every selection.

What the World Council of Churches was experiencing was the same hot breath that jars Berkeley, taunts Columbia, and worries De Gaulle—but with one difference. The cry for change, renewal and, if necessary, revolution, is the center of the Christian message. With all its natural conservatism and plodding ways, the World Council would like to stay close to its center.

Most English bridge players seem to be overbidders, but the late Kenneth Konstam combined his overbidding with an ability to bring home contracts. Here is a hand he played when his English team won the 1955 World's championship.

Most players would have settled for four hearts after North's double of three clubs, but Kenneth tried a club cue bid. His partner, Adam Meredith, could find no better call than four spades and Kenneth had to go to five hearts.

Kenneth ruffed the opening club and led a low spade to West's king. The ten of spades came back. He took his ace and played three rounds of hearts. He wasn't looking at all the cards or he would simply have tried the finesse.

His discards from dummy were a club and a diamond. East was on lead and played his jack of spades to dummy's queen.

Declarer had set up an automatic double squeeze. All he had to do was to ruff a club and run the rest of his trumps. The last four cards in dummy were the king and one diamond, seven of spades and jack of clubs. West had to go down to three cards before dummy played and was forced to throw a diamond to hold a high club.

The jack of clubs had done its work and was discarded, whereupon the seven of spades exerted pressure on East. He could not throw away the nine of spades and was forced to let go of the guard for the diamond jack. The diamonds had all become good.

The more conservative declarers in the other room played and made four hearts. Konstam's fine dummy play had picked up 30 points, but normal dummy play might have cost 720 points.

The average Frenchman spends 1¾ hours eating per day, West Germans spend 1½, hours, Americans 1¼ hours and Russians only 50 minutes. The French National Institute of Statistics also reports, according to The World Almanac, that the average Frenchman sleeps 8¼ hours nightly, the average American only 7½ hours.

Flaws in College Structure Spawn Student Rebellions

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) The student riots have been more successful than they otherwise might have been because of major weaknesses within the universities themselves.

In recent closed meetings of educators, the vice president of one major university has not hesitated to say bluntly, "The internal (university) problems we have are ... confusion, disorganization, self-interest rampant, a general malaise in which the cardinal principle of conduct is 'every man for himself.'"

Burton R. Clark, professor of sociology at Yale University, says that along with student discontent there is faculty discontent. "administrator discontent and trustee discontent. The full-time researchers in the campus laboratories are... displeased with their position on campus... Graduate students who double as teachers are increasingly sure they are a dispossessed proletariat..."

Arthur H. Scouton, graduate chairman of English at the University of Pennsylvania, complains that "teachers join students in mass protests, they break up deliberations at faculty meetings, they go on picket lines and they are prepared (in some places)... to engage in concerted strikes..."

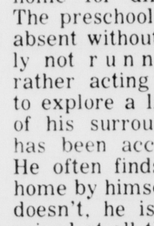

Says Richard Axen, professor of higher education at San Francisco State College, "We all know that much of our lower division required curriculum is the sterile product of graduate school research and training and has little relevance to the modern world, yet we refuse to change. We all know that much college financing and energies are siphoned off into research pursuits at the expense of teaching and student learning, yet we gladly tolerate this state of affairs..."

The executive vice president of Fordham University, John J. Meng, says that many professors "become expert in the science of grantsmanship and allow their teaching aptitudes to decay. For far too many of them the pinnacle of success becomes the day when, with the title of full professor, equipped with a private laboratory, a computer and a battery of teaching assistants, they can be freed from direct contacts with students."

Lewis B. Mayhew, professor of education at Stanford University, predicts that by 1980 "some institutions will not only condone coeducational or cohabitational living, as they now do, but actually provide university facilities, in the form of apartment style residence halls to facilitate it."

But the major complaint is that too many of the universities and their faculties have become so impersonal the student is lost. The professors privately admit to "canned knowledge," "packaged formulae" and "learning by fiat."

This is why the campus bully boys attract numbers of students who otherwise would be appalled by their strong-arm methods.

Running Away from Home Is Impulse to Explore

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Children run away from home for different reasons. The preschool child who goes absent without leave is usually not running away but rather acting on an impulse to explore a little larger part of his surroundings than he has been accustomed to do. He often finds his way back home by himself and, when he doesn't, he is genuinely surprised at all the fuss over his escapade.

When an older child runs away the problem is not so simple. He often feels a crushing sense of helplessness in the face of parental restrictions no matter how reasonable and just they may be. He is rebelling against his own inability to control his environment and he is too immature to realize that running away will in no way help the situation.

A study was made of 42 runaways and 42 other children, referred to a child guidance clinic, who had not run away. The runaways were more likely than the others to complain of being picked on, falsely accused of misbehavior and ridiculed or humiliated by their parents.

This study points up the need for building up a feeling of mutual respect between parents and their children. A child will accept, even welcome, rigid ground rules when he is treated with love and respect and made to understand the basic principles behind the rules. There is usually no hope for improvement in a situation involving running away from home unless the parents, as well as the child, are willing to accept psychological counseling.

Q—Our son, 4, was found to have von Willebrand's disease. How severe is this? What restrictions should be placed on his activities?

A—This disease, also called pseudohemophilia, is a congenital condition in which there is profuse bleeding due to a prolonged bleeding time. It differs from true hemophilia in that in von Willebrand's disease the coagulation time is normal and it may occur in girls as well as boys.

As in the case of true hemophilia, every effort must be made to prevent injuries to the child. Contact sports are out. When bleeding occurs, local pressure is often all that is required to control it but, if the bleeding is internal, the problem is serious. Surgical operations must be avoided if possible and, when they are necessary, special preparations to control the bleeding must be made.

Difficult to Define Maddox

By TED SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Two years ago Lester Maddox, one of the South's best known symbols of segregation, was running for governor of Georgia on the slogan: "You know where he stands."

Most people thought they did. To the racist element, he was a hero who had personally chased Negroes from his Pickrick cafeteria, carrying a pistol and backed up by ax handles.

To the liberals, he was a dangerous extremist; to the moderates, a publicity-seeker, a clown.

Gov. Lester Maddox

To the Democrats, he was a party bolter who supported Republican Barry Goldwater in 1964. To the Republicans, he was not quite respectable enough to be acceptable. To the politicians he was a three-time loser, in races for mayor of Atlanta and lieutenant governor of Georgia.

Few of them gave him any chance of ever being governor.

Maddox has been governor now for 18 months, and few people are sure they do know where he stands, or whether they ever did.

As governor, Maddox has displayed a paradoxical mixture of compassion for the poor and contempt for poverty programs designed to help them; demands for law and order and denunciations of the courts; appeals for patriotism and damnings of the federal government; surprising moderation and statements that seemed startlingly extreme.

He keeps his own counsel, has few close advisers, and largely ignores those who have attempted to temper his public image.

Those responsible for the moderate tone of his inaugural address, in which he warned that there would be no room for extremism in Georgia during his administration, soon lost his ear.

A high school dropout, Maddox has pledged top priority to education. He kept a campaign pledge to increase teachers' salaries by an average of $1,258 a year during his first two years in office.

When pressed about his loyalty to the national Democratic party, Maddox said that pledging to support party nominees without knowing who they are would be putting party ahead of God and country.

He has promised, however, that he will not go outside the party and endorse third-party presidential candidate George Wallace, although he has held private political meetings with Walace and admittedly would like to support him formally and openly.

The 53-year-old Maddox, son of a devout Southern Baptist mother, does not drink or smoke and frequently lectures on the evils of both.

He once threatened to extend enforcement of the state's anti-gambling laws to include church bingo, and periodically he prods the Revenue Department to crack down on Sunday liquor sales at country clubs and other private clubs.

Maddox's election by the General Assembly when there was no majority winner in the general election has given rise to legislative independence unparalleled in recent Georgia history.

In this year's General Assembly session, most legislation on which Maddox had placed a high priority either failed or was significantly amended.

But the governor can point to victories in such nonlegislative areas as penal reform, which he has promised to make one of the hallmarks of his administration.

The resolve was prompted to a great extent by five Negro inmates. Four of them excaped and surrendered to Maddox one Sunday at the governor's mansion, complaining of prison conditions.

The fifth drowned in a pond at a public works camp, while retrieving ducks shot by a guard. Camp officials said the inmate went into the icy water voluntarily.

Under pressure from the governor, prison conditions have been improved, especially in public works camps maintained by counties.

Almost daily, in speeches, informal chats, interviews and capital hallway news conferences, Maddox sounds the rallying cry against "the Communists, Socialists, leftwingers, bums, beatniks, looters, rioters and wreckers," all of whom he roughly equates with civil rights activists.

Yet Negroes have made more advances in state government during his administration than in any previous one. The number of Negroes on local draft boards, for example, has risen from two to more than 20. Maddox instructed that Negroes be hired into the previously all-white Georgia Bureau of Investigation, and there now are two on the 85-man force.

Twice each month in the governor's office, Maddox conducts Little People's Day, when crowds of people gather to file through, shake his hand and confide to him problems that they cannot solve.

Maddox assigns each problem to a member of his staff, although he acknowledges, "There isn't anything I can do for most of the people who come. It just lets them know that there is someone in government who cares."

One of the fears most often expressed about the election of Maddox was the manner in which he might react to racial violence.

So far the state has been free of any major violence, even during the tense time after the death of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The night King was killed, Maddox sealed off the governor's mansion and refused to talk to newsmen by telephone. The next day he issued a brief, carefully worded statement deploring the murder and quietly alerted 2,000 National Guardsmen.

The day of the funeral, however Maddox said privately it made him "sick at his stomach" to see flags at the capitol lowered to half staff in mourning for a man he had denounced as a tool of the Communists and once, before his election, had promised to run out of the state.

The governor stopped short of officially ordering the secretary of state to raise the flag, but he did refuse to close the Capitol.

Instead, he fortified it with 200 club-carrying, helmeted state troopers and other law enforcement officials who circled the Capitol and patrolled its corridors with shotguns as the thousands of mourners marched past.

The next day he congratulated Atlanta Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. that the massive funeral had been without incident.

Determined Man

Lester Maddox, the governor of Ga., took strong stands in his business life, including construction of a monument at his restaurant site in 1964, left; and, as governor in 1968, lowering the flags to half-staff in protest against a U. S. Supreme Court decision on freedom-of-choice desegregation plans. (AP)

Nixon Hunts For Support In 3 Areas

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's hopes for a first ballot victory at next week's Republican National Convention appear to depend on some 200 uncommitted delegates, three large "favorite son" states and his ability to hold Southern delegates.

These three factors appeared in an updated Associated Press tally of likely first ballot strength, based on primary results, pledges and firm statements in response to AP polls, which showed Nixon with 547 votes—120 below the 667 needed for the GOP presidential nomination.

Nixon remained well ahead of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, New York, who has 208 and Gov. Ronald Reagan, California, who has 157. Other favorite sons total 264 votes, while 207 are uncommitted. In the past five days, Nixon has gained five, Rockefeller six and Reagan three.

Caucuses are planned by many delegations Monday, including Michigan, Ohio and Maryland, where 125 votes are currently ticketed for Govs. George Romney, James A. Rhodes and Spiro T. Agnew.

On the Democratic side, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey lost 17½ in a week but remained far ahead with 775 of the 1,312 needed. Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy who gained 7 from Humphrey when Maryland's unit rule was rescinded and also gained in West Virginia, has 432½, while favorite sons control 656, the uncommitted delegates total 746½ and 12 are scattered elsewhere.

Old Team Together For Show

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — It was enough to gladden the heart of a film buff: George O'Brien and Dorothy MacKaill — together again for the first time since "The Man Who Came Back."

Many a middle-aged movie fan will remember the 1931 movie and will recall the blonde beauty of Miss MacKaill and the muscular handsomeness of George O'Brien. For those who like to play the "whatever happened to—?" game, it can be reported that Miss MacKaill lives alone at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel and likes it. She is still as bright and bouncy as when she was co-starring with Jack Mulhall and couldn't care less about an acting career. The record books indicate she is 65, but her daily swims in the Waikiki surf have helped erase a decade or two from her appearance.

The George O'Brien story requires a bit more telling. He was in Hawaii on vacation with his daughter Orin, bassist with the New York Philharmonic, and after reminiscing about the golden Hollywood days with Miss MacKaill, he talked to a reporter about his long and varied career.

O'Brien was the athlete son of the police chief of San Francisco.

"It was through my dad that I got into the picture business," the actor remarked. "Tom Mix came to San Francisco to appear at a rodeo for the policemen's benefit fund. I had worked out with police horses since I was a small kid, and Mix was impressed with the way I rode in the rodeo. He told me to look him up if I ever came to Hollywood."

Later O'Brien went south to seek a career as a cameraman, but found Mix was out of town. He talked himself into a job as assistant cameraman at Fox, then got into stunt work. The big break came in 1924, when John Ford picked him to star in the classic western, "The Iron Horse."

O'Brien became one of the leading outdoor stars of the 1920s and successfully bridged the talkies. Among his notable films: "Sunrise," "Noah's Ark," "Line Star Ranger," "Riders of the Purple Sage," "Daniel Boone," "The Last Trail," "The Painted Desert," "Stage to Chino."

He had served a hitch in the Navy as a sailor, and in 1940 the Navy asked him to re-enlist as an officer—"We figure your example would help recruitment," he was told. Although he was earning big money co-producing his own Westerns, O'Brien couldn't resist the offer. He served almost six years and found he had to build his acting career all over again. His old pal Ford cast him in such films as "Fort Apache" and "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon."

In 1955, the Navy again sought O'Brien's services as an officer with NATO.

O'Brien retired as a captain in 1962 and once more returned to acting—again for Ford in "Cheyenne Autumn." Now 69 and as vigorous as in his sagebrush days, he is eager to work in films. "But there's no pressure. Thank God I saved my money," he added.

He has been divorced for 20 years from his onetime co-star and mother of his three children, Marguerite Churchill.

A LOOK AT THE RECORD
In The 74th Session of The MISSOURI GENERAL ASSEMBLY

His activity in the Missouri State Legislature towards the progress and development of District 115, Missouri House of Representatives is the best attestment why Joe F.Rains should be returned to the Missouri General Assembly. Here are only a few legislative matters he has actively supported and promoted:

• ELDERLY MISSOURIANS

Joe Rains was appointed by Gov. Hearnes to the Task Force Committee working in behalf of our senior citizens.

• OTHER IMPORTANT COMMITTEES

Joe Rains was also appointed to other important committees, including Agriculture, Appropriations, and Ways and Means. All of these brought about constructive programs and legislation benefitting citizens in our District.

• COMMUNITY BETTERMENT

The records in Jefferson City will show that Representative Rains enthusiastically supported all legislation towards the betterment of our veterans, youth, railroads, libraries, education, labor, business and highways.

POLLY'S POINTERS

DEAR POLLY---To keep my purse neater, I use an open end eye glass case to hold pens, lipstick and small things that fall to the bottom of a purse. We all enjoy your column and put many of the pointers to use. ---EVELYN

DEAR POLLY—Colorful beach towels make ideal bedspreads as they are wrinkle-proof and very easy to wash. Mine fit twin-size beds and are ideal for cots in the summer cottage. A gift for a father-to-be is a package for the waiting room jitters. Included would be magazines, fruit, cigarettes, change for the telephone, phone numbers to call to spread the news, aspirin and even a tranquilizer. —HEATHER

DEAR POLLY---My youngster is trained to put on his clothes so the tags are in the back. When I make any of his clothes I always sew a scrap of material (like a tag) in the back of the garment so he can tell it from the front. This makes the child more independent and saves many steps.---B. G.

Polly pays a dollar for every idea used. Send them to her, care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY---I have a round swivel-type vanity chair which needed a new seat cover. I bought a pretty flowered shower cap and it fit over the seat perfectly. This was inexpensive and can be wiped clean.---MRS. C. H.

DEAR POLLY—I make my two small boys' sport shirts. When cutting out the pockets I always have the material doubled even if the shirt is to have only one pocket. This way I have a nice square to put in my sewing machine drawer, handy if a patch is needed. This saves digging through scraps which are often used for quilts anyway.—M. J. T.

DEAR POLLY---When one of my bed pads becomes worn I cut out the good parts and use them as liners for attractive pot holders or oven mittens. If the parts are large enough I cover and use for crib pads.---MRS. L. L.

DEAR POLLY—When I crochet I find that the ball of thread keeps moving around on the table and I have to stop to unwind more thread. I brace a broom against the table and slip the crochet thread ball down the broom handle. The table stops the ball from falling down the handle. The thread unwinds as I work.—DIANA

DEAR POLLY—Slip one of Dad's old socks, any color and any size, over a brick to make a real nice door stop in a couple of jiffies.—BILLIE

What Your Fears Mean and How to Control Them

Ask Them Yourself

FOR BILLY GRAHAM

Since the Bible states that sin is in the heart, do you think that in heart transplants the personal characteristics of the donor are also transmitted to the recipient?—Mrs. Esther Silleman, Petaluma, Calif.

● No. In the Bible the word "heart" is used as a symbolic word, standing for the entire "inner man" which involves his understanding, memory, the ability to make moral judgments, and his spirit. Thus the transplanting of the physical organ does not affect man's nature or personality and has no theological implications whatsoever.

FOR ANNAMARIE HUSTE,

Jacqueline Kennedy's former cook

Do you think that every woman should have a blender in her kitchen? —Jean Amedley, Cambridge, Md.

● Certainly. I use my blender every time I cook a meal and can't imagine turning out meals without one.

FOR JACKIE GLEASON

How did your famous line, "How sweet it is," originate?—Ellison C. Jenkins, Johnson City, Tenn.

● I've been saying that for years. I made it stick in a movie, "Papa's Delicate Condition," and then continued it on my tv show.

FOR LOU BROCK, St. Louis Cardinals

I have read that when you steal bases, you look at the pitcher instead of the catcher. Why?—D. Gallagher, Pawling, N.Y.

● Because most bases are stolen off the pitcher rather than the catcher. If a pitcher allows the base runner to get a long lead and a good jump, even a catcher with a strong arm will find it difficult to throw the runner out.

FOR GEN. WILLIAM F. McKEE,

director, Federal Aviation Agency

How many women in the U.S. hold commercial aviation licenses?—L. M., Green Bay, Wis.

● There are 61 women who hold airline-transport ratings and 1,317 who hold commercial licenses.

FOR REP. L. MENDEL RIVERS,

chairman, House Armed Services Committee

If a mother has only one child, a son—and his father was killed in service—can he be drafted?—A. M., Urbana, Ill.

● The law provides that the sole-surviving son is exempt from service in a family where the father or brother was killed in service. Many people erroneously assume, however, that a son would be excused from combat service because he is an only child; this is not true.

FOR DICK CAVETT

How did you start your tv career?—Robert Allen, Woodhaven, N.Y.

● I was a copy boy for a national magazine and wrote jokes on the side. I heard that Jack Paar was looking for material. By a stroke of luck I ran into him at NBC and bombarded him with jokes. He liked them and hired me.

FOR ROY COHN,

former aide to the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy

What are you doing now, and what is your former associate, David Schine, doing?—D. M., Rochester, N.Y.

● David Schine is running his own business in Los Angeles. I am practicing law in New York City and have just published a book entitled "McCarthy."

FOR AMY VANDERBILT,

etiquette authority

How should I address a wedding-anniversary card to two physicians married to each other?—Conrad Fiorello, Brooklyn, N.Y.

● Address it to "The Doctors Jones."

FOR MICHAEL LANDON

of "Bonanza"

I've noticed you don't always ride the same horse in "Bonanza." How many different horses do you use in your shows?—Raymond Inlow, Ashland, Ore.

● I normally ride my pinto "Cochise" in the series, but I have three more "stands-ins" available. Horses, like men, get winded. The American Humane Association insists on the extra horses.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

Home Sweet Home A and M Records—for Herb "Tijuana Brass" Alpert and Jerry Moss—produces its music on the site of the old Charlie Chaplin estate. A life-size statue of the comedian reminds visitors that the sound stage is Chaplin's filled-in, Olympic-size swimming pool; the main gate stands where his stables were. To show how Hollywood has changed, the offices for this multimillion-dollar business are housed in a building that in the lavish old days Chaplin used for a guest "cottage."

Dill Pitcher New York Mets pitcher Nolan Ryan could be named "Man of the Year" by the Pickle Packers of America. It seems that Ryan's smoking fast ball causes blisters on the middle finger of his right hand. Met's trainer Gus Mauch has Ryan soak his finger in pickle brine to toughen the skin. Rival pickle companies are competing by offering the stuff to the Met ace free, and one Bronx supermarket proudly displays a barrel of dills with a sign reading: "Mets pitching juice sold here." What does Ryan say about all this? "I don't like pickles."

Unemployed Kings What do exkings do? That's a question King Constantine might well have asked himself when he fled Greece. Looking around, he could spot 11 former European monarchs, all with no job training except reigning. Some are lucky enough to have kept the crown jewels; these fortunates loll about in Spain and Portugal. Others must make do as best they can. King Michael of Romania has become a securities salesman, and King Peter II of Yugoslavia has made a royal alliance with a California savings and loan association.

Cancer Clue Sharks may give us a clue to a cancer cure. Because they never get the disease and are able to resist most viruses, Dr. M. Michael Sigel of the University of Miami School of Medicine is experimenting with a shark serum mixed with sarcoma virus. When the serum plus virus was injected into chicks, 22 to 38 percent produced tumors. But when the virus alone was injected, about 90 percent produced tumors.

Without a Song Singer Nancy Ames has a peculiar problem. In 1966 she wrote a song called "Cinderella Rockefeller," which became one of Europe's all-time hits. When Nancy tried to record the song here, she had no success. "It wasn't hip enough then," she says. "But it's a 'Roaring 20s' sound, and that's hot now." Since it must be sung by a duet, Nancy hopes to record it with either Dean Martin or the song's co-author, Mason Williams. "I don't think it can miss," she says. Neither does Presidential candidate Nelson Rockefeller. It's rumored he'd like it as his theme song.

The Senate Majority Leader claims we choose our President in a "circuslike atmosphere"; he proposes a sweeping electoral reform and, as a beginning, says—

Let's Abolish National Political

By Sen. MIKE MANSFIELD (Mont.)

THIS WEEK begins a new phase of our our national political circus, the Republican Presidential nominating convention in Miami. The second act will open in three weeks when the Democrats choose their nominee in Chicago.

We already have experienced some preliminary political extravaganzas—a handful of happenstance Presidential primaries, delegate-hunting among state delegations, and poll-pundits demonstrating the most recent popularity of each candidate.

The entire archaic system of choosing our President is filled with inequities and inadequacies. State primaries should either be revamped or done away with—as should national conventions. The election of a President by middlemen of the Electoral College simply should be abolished.

The United States needs a new election system which is more just, more democratic, and more rational. With Sen. George Aiken (Vermont) and others, I have introduced in Congress recommendations for reform that hopefully will precipitate the study and adoption of an electoral system more appropriate for the time and tempo of modern America. Briefly, these proposals suggest:

- Eliminating the Electoral College;
- Allowing the people to elect their President directly;
- Extending the franchise of the ballot to young adults 18 and older;
- Altering party conventions or replacing them with a national primary;
- Limiting the Presidency to only one term of six years.

Some aspects of this over-all plan may have greater merit than others. At the same time, I believe that the full spectrum of the electoral process embraced within these proposals should be studied carefully since they are all connected.

Let me explain some of the reasoning behind these proposals—proposals which have been made before in Congress but which seem to us more vital than ever now.

In our present election system, the primaries are little more than random showcases in which Presidential hopefuls try to impress party leaders with their mass popularity. Yet the relatively few Americans who vote in them represent but a fraction of our population and nothing like a cross section.

Most delegates to national conventions are selected indirectly by state conventions. Many candidates even disdain campaigning in popular primaries and, instead, concentrate on sewing up state party blocs. These blocs do not necessarily reflect the real feelings of the people of the states.

A national primary would allow all Americans to participate fully and directly in nominating their party candidates. Conventions could still be held for the adoption of the party platform and other purposes but without the cheapening atmosphere present now.

There is another advantage in a national primary. An enormous amount of money is spent in preconvention barnstorming. Any candidate who is underfinanced and understaffed is penalized regardless of his qualifications. Bewildered and confused voters can justifiably charge that wealth, not qualification, often determines the course of our current primaries. Any election reform, to be completely effective, must thus include a proposal for adequate campaign financing.

Next, we propose eliminating the Electoral College. This anachronism confronts Americans with the prospect of having a President who does not represent the people or even the election results of the states. Once the Presidential office was an accommodation of the interests of regional blocs. Today it represents the direct interests of the people—and, therefore, the archaic regionalism of the Electoral College should be supplanted by direct voting. To continue the Electoral College is to deny the cohesiveness of the 50 states as a national unit, and to ignore the evolution of our nation technologically and ideologically.

After all, the states already are represented by two Senators; cities and districts are represented by elected Congressmen. Why not have the electoral process underscore the fact that the President represents the people as a whole?

We also believe it is time to extend the vote to 18-year-olds. In recent times, we have witnessed young people spending time and energy campaigning for candidates of their choice only Conventions!

Political conventions—serious or circus? Critics say we select men for our highest office in an atmosphere of buffoonery and revelry.

to suffer the denial, after their diligent work, of the vote. It is time we brought our youth totally into the society they live in, giving them a voice and a vote equal to the responsibilities already resting on them.

It has often been pointed out that we demand that 18-year-olds fight for their country yet foreclose to them the privilege of participating in selecting the officials who decide the course of war or peace. We also treat them as adults in our criminal and civil courts but deny them the opportunity to choose the officials who make the laws.

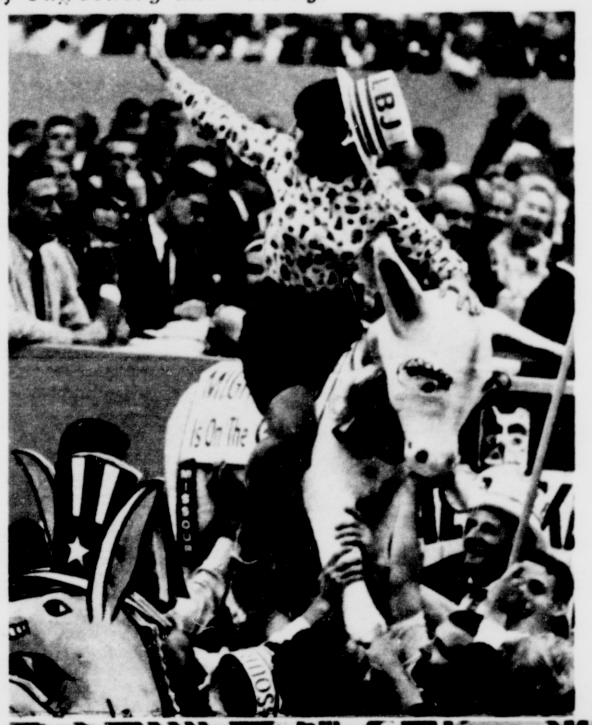

Finally, Senator Aiken and I suggest limiting the Presidency to a single six-year term. This is not a new proposal. We simply believe that any investigation of the electoral system must include the length of term of the President, if it is to consider the methods of his election.

We cannot separate the effects of partisanship after the election when considering partisanship before the election. The burdens of partisan politics inherent in seeking a second term should be considered when evaluating any electoral procedures dealing with the Presidency. The single six-year term is the law in Mexico, and it has worked very well there.

As I said, these proposals are not new. What is new is the urgency. We have been propelled into an era in which systems that worked well in the past can and must be much improved.

As you watch the hectic conventions on tv these coming weeks, you will see in the chaos, maneuvering, and thwarted hopes the fundamental reason why the people must be given a more direct voice in naming a President.

You will see why our entire electoral system should be modernized. ◈

Press Comments About the Mansfield Proposals

The existing system is nonsensical and dangerous. The state primaries are expensive and prove not enough. Both conventions have become unrepresentative of the electorate . . . the electoral college has the capacity to elect the candidate with the fewer votes, or no one at all.

—Baltimore Sun

As for Mr. Mansfield's other proposals, a single six-year term for the President, it might better be left in his secret file. Having limited every President to two four-year terms only a few years ago, Congress is not likely further to shorten the time in which an administration can carry out its program . . .

—Washington (D.C.) Post

National primaries raise many problems. Where do the independents go? . . . What about multiple entries? These might well produce either runoff primaries, which would drag out the length and cost of the process, or minority nominees . . . How would Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates be matched? . . . Both the conventions and the electoral college, moreover, act as safeguards against pure democracy—as brakes on unbridled popular will, with all its dangers.

—Tom Wicker, New York Times

These are all thought-provoking ideas . . . Why not appoint a joint Senate-House committee to make a thorough study and to come up with some conclusions? The American political system has served us well in the past. But as times change, institutions must change, too. This would be a good time for Congress to make a fresh appraisal of the machinery of American politics . . .

BARBARA STANWYCK—

The Loneliest Woman in Hollywood

Marriages have failed, a son has turned from her—all that is left is work

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

"WHEN I first started in pictures," Barbara Stanwyck told me, "I made up my mind I wanted to retire when I was 40.

"Well, I didn't quite make it. I did try in 1952 or '53. I didn't work for one whole year. I went to Europe, but just how many cathedrals can you see? I simply didn't know what to do with myself, so I went back to work."

Today the star of "The Big Valley" television series has only one love in her life, her weekly tv show. "To me, a script is something much more dependable than a man," she once said. "I've had that!"

That's all she has left after a career as a top movie star in close to 90 films, after two unsuccessful marriages, and a disastrous real-life role as a mother. In spite of a handful of friends such as her maid and companion, Harriett Corey, and publicist, Helen Ferguson, she is probably the loneliest actress in Hollywood.

Except for books, she doesn't have any outside interests. Commenting on her Thunderbird, for instance, she says, "It just gets me around. I am not a car buff."

Barbara Stanwyck, "Missy" to her coworkers, is a tough, robust, domineering yet extremely well-liked woman who is so completely honest about herself that even her official biography states her birthdate—July 6, 1907. "There is no reason to lie about my age," she insists. "I am what I am, and people can either take me as I am or not at all."

When she first started the tv series, Barbara told her producers, "Don't try to make Victoria Barkley into something I am not. If you want someone to tiptoe down the Barkley staircase in crinoline and politely ask where the cattle went, get another girl. I want to do things."

And she did, without ever complaining. In one episode a horse was supposed to drag her several hundred feet. She turned down the idea of a double, insisting only that a stunt man ride the horse because "he knew how to handle it."

Barbara proudly recalls how she fought her way to the top. Born Ruby Stevens in Brooklyn, N.Y., she was the youngest of five children who were orphaned in childhood. At 14, she followed her sister Mildred, a chorus girl, onto the stage as a chorine in a cabaret. She started her film career opposite Rod LaRoque.

Now there is bitterness in her voice because she can no longer find a job in a feature film. "I'd still like to make movies, but no one asks me."

Barbara is even more bitter about her private life: her stormy marriage in 1928 to the late comedian Frank Fay, who was an established Broadway musical-comedy star at the time; her second marriage to Robert Taylor; most of all, about the separation from the son she adopted with Fay and about whose custody they fought bitterly. Barbara and son Tony—who now works as a hotel clerk—have not seen or spoken to each other since 1952.

Barbara has done many good deeds which generally go by unnoticed under a cover of gruffness with which she rules her fellow actors, her guest stars, and her directors—almost all of whom love her dearly. She once sent a technician to Arizona to recover his health, paying all his bills.

Most of all, she is appreciated by the younger generation of actors who look up to her as one of the few remaining greats in show business, possibly the only actress of her generation who works steadily.

Financially, Barbara has no problems. "I have had a business manager for the past 31 years. I told him how much I needed when I retired, and he put me on an allowance to which I've stuck ever since."

She is still a good-looking, slender woman who resents a recent statement that she eats steak three times a day to keep her figure trim. "I eat steak because I need the energy, and I do it only when I am working. When I am not working, I eat almost anything, although frankly, I am not all that fond of food."

During the nine months when the series is in production, nothing else exists except her work. It is the other three months which pose a problem because she becomes bored with anything she does, with the exception of reading. Also, she often goes to the movies, sometimes staying all day.

With the weak rating of her series, there's a good chance that the coming season may be her last on tv. What then for a vigorous woman who has only work left in her life? Barbara Stanwyck is aware of the gray future—but she has been indomitable through past woes and isn't likely to be bowed now.

Still, I asked her whether she would live her life differently if she could do it again. She snapped off a cuss word like the old trouper she is —". . . you bet I wouldn't." ◆

Get the Most Out of Sweet Corn on the Cob

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

■ In August corn is usually most plentiful. So—serve corn on the cob often, and also combine those sweet, juicy kernels with ingredients to accentuate the flavor of fresh corn as in these recipes.

Olive Corn Pie

- 1½ cups Cheddar cheese-flavored cracker crumbs (finely crushed)
- ⅓ cup butter or margarine, melted
- 1¼ cups milk
- 2 cups fresh corn kernels cut from cob (about 4 medium-sized ears)
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- ½ teaspoon Accent
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ½ cup sliced pimiento-stuffed olives

1. Mix crumbs with the melted butter or margarine. Reserve ⅓ cup; press remainder onto bottom and sides of a 9-in. pie plate. Set aside.

2. Put into a heavy saucepan 1 cup of the milk and next four ingredients. Bring to boiling and simmer, uncovered, 3 min., stirring occasionally.

3. Blend flour with remaining milk. Stir into boiling mixture in saucepan. Cook and stir for 2 min.

4. Add hot mixture gradually to the beaten eggs, stirring until blended. Mix in olives. Sprinkle top with reserved crumbs.

5. Bake at 400°F. 20 min. or until a silver knife comes out clean when inserted in pudding halfway between center and edge of pie plate.

6. Cut in wedges. One 9-in. pie

Corn on a Grill

In foil: Remove husks, silk, and blemishes from ears of corn. Place each ear on a piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Brush generously with Golden Glow Butter. Wrap foil around ears, sealing edges with double folds. Set on grill and cook about 15 min., turning frequently. Partially unwrap and serve corn in foil with a bowl of Golden Glow Butter and a shaker of Accent.

In the husk: Loosen husks only enough to remove silks and blemishes from ears of corn. Dip ears in water. Shake well. Rewrap husks around corn. Plunge into water again and let stand until husks are soaked, about 1 hr. Place ears over coals and roast, turning frequently, until tender, about 15 min. Immediately husk the corn, brush with Golden Glow Butter, and sprinkle with Accent.

Golden Glow Butter

Heat together ½ cup butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons sieved pimiento, ½ teaspoon onion juice, ¼ teaspoon paprika, ⅛ teaspoon salt, and a few grains black pepper. Use as a dipping or brushing sauce or use on freshly cooked corn. Sprinkle corn generously with Accent.

Creamy kernels of corn and slices of Spanish olives mingle in a rich custard set in a cracker crumb crust.

Corn "Oysters"

1 cup sifted regular all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon Accent
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 teaspoons dill weed, crushed
2 cups fresh corn kernels cut from cob (about 4 ears)
6 tablespoons milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 egg whites, beaten to stiff, not dry, peaks
Fat* (about 1-in. deep for shallow frying) 365°F.

1. Sift the dry ingredients together into a bowl. Stir in dill and a mixture of the corn, milk, and beaten egg yolks. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

2. Drop by the teaspoonful into hot fat. Fry uncrowded until golden on both sides, turning once. Lift out of fat with slotted spoon and drain on absorbent paper-lined baking sheet. Serve hot. About 2½ cups batter

*Suitable fats include salad and all-purpose oils, vegetable shortening, all-purpose shortening, and lard.

Favorite Corn Relish

1 qt. fresh corn kernels cut from cob (about 8 ears)
½ small head young green cabbage, finely chopped (2 cups)
2 medium-sized sweet red peppers, diced (1¼ cups)
½ bunch celery including heart, edible portion of root, and tender leaves, finely chopped (about 1 qt.)
1 large onion, finely chopped (about 1 cup)
1 clove garlic, minced
1½ teaspoons celery seed
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon salt
1 teaspoon Accent
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon turmeric
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cups cider vinegar

1. Put vegetables, garlic, celery seed, and a mixture of sugar and seasonings in a kettle. Stir in vinegar.

2. Bring mixture to boiling over medium heat; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, 15 to 20 min. (Avoid overcooking. Celery should be crisp-tender.)

3. If the consistency of relish is too thin, blend 2 to 3 tablespoons flour and ½ cup cold water. Stir into boiling relish. Cook and stir for 2 min.

4. Quickly ladle into hot sterilized jars and seal immediately, following manufacturer's directions.

Four 1-pt. jars relish

Your Beauty Horoscope

ASTROLOGERS say we are governed by the elements—fire, air, earth, and water—as well as the stars. What does your element sign forecast for you? What's in your beauty future? Read on!

FIRE: These people are the pioneers, the independents. Aries (March 21-April 20) is the first, then Leo (July 23-Aug. 23) and Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21). They aren't afraid to stand out in a crowd and feel an affinity for the kinetic, the dramatic.

Fiery people would choose "Khadine," a new collection of fragrance products from Yardley. The scent is a lingering one of ylang, myrrh, floral spices, and oils of patchouli and sandalwood. They would also be the first to try pretend lashes that attach to the lower rim of the eye, as well as to the upper. From Aziza, lashes come in black or brown.

AIR: These are the idealists of the horoscope, usually intellectual and dispassionate in judgment. At the same time, they are lively, too.

Gemini (May 22-June 21), Libras (Sept. 24-Oct. 23), and Aquarius (Jan. 21-Feb. 19) are interested in the scientific.

They would be naturally drawn to a device that vibrates, like Helena Rubinstein's Pat-A-Glow, which gently pats the face at a rate of 1,800 strokes per minute to render skin glowing and firm.

Air people also would be intrigued by Goody's hairdo protector pillow cover of acetate satin. It's anti-static, friction-free to keep your hairdo in tow until morning. Or, Geminesse light night cream might prove irresistible. Inspired by the Gemini sign of the twins, this dual-purpose formula cream has one of the airiest textures. Replenishes vital oils for dry and normal skins.

EARTH: Under this element is Taurus (April 21-May 21), who conveys tranquility and composure; Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 20), who is businesslike even in beauty affairs; Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22), who frets over details and is advised to relax a little. All three have an affinity for nature.

What would capture their hearts are beauty goods with natural origins: Wrisley Lemon Twist bath powder sprays on in a cool, misty cloud of tart, lemony fragrance. A prickly desert plant, the cactus Aloe Vera, gives up a gel that forms the basis for Shulton's Aloe Vera skin-care collection—notably their hand and body lotion, enriched with avocado oil.

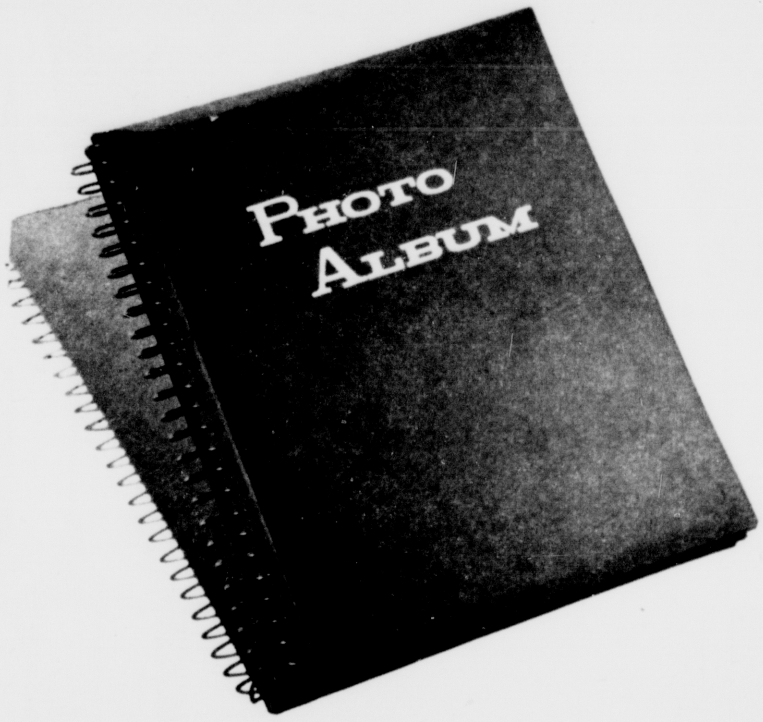

WATER: Those under this element are mercurial, highly intuitive, often poetic and spiritual. Cancer (June 22-July 22), Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) and Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) are naturally drawn to the ocean.

"Water babies" would rush to add Revlon's Seawater Concentrate to their beauty collection. It contains rare minerals, soothing salts, echoes the scent of the sea. Importantly, it floats away dryness. Clairol's Moisture Whip, to impart a gleaming countenance under make-up, raises the moisture or water content of the complexion—then helps maintain that level. It is color-toned to your individual hair shade.

Piscarians, who are gentle, dreamy types, especially would adore owning a new portable whirlpool bath unit from Sales Research Development Co. As invigorating as the surf, a special nozzle pinpoints massage action to face or neck to help firm tissues.

What Your Fears Mean— and What to Do About Them

By JOHN E. GIBSON

PLAGUED by anxieties? Well, who isn't! The real question is —what do you do about them?

Scientists have been studying human fears in hopes they can provide an answer. In any event, their research findings may help you understand yourself better and bring you relief.

What are the chief fears of most Americans?

A study by the Illinois Institute of Technology showed the most common fear to be anxiety over financial matters. Other chief fears included anxiety about health, concern over making the right impression on business and social contacts, worries over marriage problems (compatibility, etc.), and fear of inadequacy.

Is it true that fear is highly contagious?

Yes. At the University of California a study showed that just being near a fear-ridden person can cause you to be vaguely fearful without knowing why. The tests showed, for example, that you can be instantly affected just by listening to voice recordings of anxiety-ridden persons. The investigators conclude that many of our fears do not originate within us at all.

How does fear affect our mental processes?

Mild anxiety merely hampers your ability to think and reason clearly. But extreme fear can paralyze your thinking processes completely.

Are women more fearful than men?

University of California researchers report that women have more fears and are more affected by them than men.

How does fear affect people physically?

It depends on the extent of the fear and the type of person. Scientists at Yale University studied the fear reaction of hundreds of persons from various walks of life, found that most people react with a pounding heart. But fear shows itself in many other forms. Here are typical reactions: pounding heart and rapid pulse; sinking feeling in the stomach; dryness in mouth and throat; trembling; sweating of palms; cold sweat all over the body; prickling sensation of scalp and back; and faintness.

Do a man's fear and anxieties tend to follow a definite age pattern?

Yes. A study of a typical cross section of American businessmen showed this to be a typical pattern: from 25 to 30, his chief anxiety is a fear that his dress, manner, and general appearance may not make the desired impression on others. In his early 30s, most of his worries arise out of conflicts and/or temptations involving sexual morality. Between 33 and 35, worries over philosophical or spiritual convictions become most pronounced. With the advent of his middle 30s, financial fears take the center of the stage. As he approaches his 40s, his anxieties shift their focus to his health, his job, and domestic difficulties. After his mid-40s, he feels a greater tranquility about things in general, and his fears resolve themselves.

Are people with high I.Q.'s less subject to fears and anxieties?

A Washington University School of Medicine study showed this to be definitely true.

What is the best way to deal with fears and anxieties?

Researchers at the University of California Medical School found one method to be most effective: don't try to conceal your fears, don't keep them secret. Fears and phobias multiply and magnify when you keep them bottled up.

Talking about them provides an escape valve for anxiety-produced tensions and will also restore your perspective. You'll find that many of the fears you've regarded as mountains will shrink to molehills. It will also permit you to sort out your fears and anxieties into two categories: the few which result from conditions outside your control and the many which you can do something about.

The university scientists concluded: the successful management of fear and anxiety seems possible only through the process of sharing them. ◆
